About the Authors and Contributors

Dr. Jerome Segel - Author

Jerome (Jay) Segel was born in Detroit, Michigan in 1957. He completed his primary education in the northwestern suburban town of Farmington Hills. After undergradute studies at Wayne State and Michigan State Universities, Jay took his Medical Doctorate in Cleveland. He headed east, continuing his medical/surgical education at Harvard post-doctoral residency hospital, Cambridge City.

Spending off weekends at the cape and islands, Jay, and his then fiancé Michelle, also a Harvard resident, moved to Martha's Vineyard in 1984 where they now live with Céline, and their three children Kevin, Vicki, Brad, three horses, five cats and a turtle.

A prolific writer of lyrics and instrumental guitar pieces, Dr. Segel has also authored two books published by the Genealogical Publishing Company (GPC) on real estate known as the Owner Unknown series. He holds patent of unique foot gear with Brine Sporting Goods, consulted for Apple Computer and Blue Cross/Blue Shield, project coordinator for the Health Care Finance Administration, contracted domestic and foreign research team leader for Native American tribes, and co-founded the New England Antiquarian Research and Title Ltd., also known as NEART.

Since its inception, the pricipals of NEART have identified manuscripts, historical maps, oseological remains, and archaelogic/ethnologic artifacts in archives, libraries, and specialty museums throughout Europe. Now Jay spends nearly one week in six researching American colonial history in Scotland, England, France, Belgium, Spain and/or the Netherlands. He continues to "Bring History Home" for Native American groups and lecture on the subject.

R. Andrew Pierce - Author

Richard Andrew Pierce, a native of New York City, has resided in Boston since 1979 where he majored in International Relations at Tufts University. He has been a professional genealogist since 1984. Mr. Pierce specializes in Irish-American lineages and tracing missing heirs. He has worked as a researcher, consultant, lecturer, and expert witness for Blake & Blake Genealogists of Braintree, Massachusetts since 1986. Formerly a member of the Enquiries Service at the prestigious New England Historic Genealogical Society in Boston from 1986 to 1996, Pierce began a private Genealogical practice in Quincy, just south of Boston.

Andy, as he is called by his friends, has contributed to several articles for the New England Historic Genealogical Society's Nexus magazine. Such contributions include the ancestry of the late United States President John Fitzgerald Kennedy. He has also contributed research to several published genealogical works, notably Gary Boyd Roberts' Ancestry of American Presidents and Edmund K. Swigart's Emerson-Benson Saga. Besides this work on the Wampanoag Genealogical History of Martha's Vineyard..., he is the author of Inscriptions from Mt. Calvary Cemetery. A long time practitioner of Martial Arts, in 1995, Andy achieved his Black Belt in the discipline of Uechi-ryu Karate. Now member of the Appalachian Mountain Club and often a guide, Andy can be found most weekends enjoying the view atop any of many mountains in Northern New England.

Helen Edith Vanderhoop Manning - Contributor

Introduction

Helen Edith Vanderhoop Manning was born September 24, 1919. Her father, Arthur Herbert Vanderhoop was a Wampanoag Indian from Aquinnah. Her mother, Evelyn Moss Vanderhoop, was an artist and educator from Washington D. C. Growing up in these two rich and culturally diverse worlds, Helen matured and excelled in the best of both. She completed her primary and secondary education in Washington D. C., attending Dunbar High School and Teacher's College. Helen received her Masters Degree from New York University in elementary education and her career spanned 45 years in Washington D. C. and Martha's Vineyard. She is now retired and very active as an elder in tribal endeavors.

Catherine Merwin Mayhew - Contributor/Editor

How To Use This Book

Kay has served as the genealogist for the Martha's Vineyard Historical Society for over twelve years. She has worked in genealogy for thirty years. Her published works range from the family genealogy in The History of Belair (Maryland) and several editions of the Genealogical Periodical Annual Index to adding fifty pages to the Vital Records of Chilmark, Massachusetts, to 1850. She has also lectured in the field and taught classes. She does research professionally as well as on behalf of the Historical Society.

Ashley Hunter - Contributor/Editor (Computer Tech.)

Ashley Hunter was born in Philadelphia, PA in 1951 and moved to Martha's Vineyard in 1974. He and Jay Segel became friends and formed the Martha's Vineyard Mac User Group in 1994. Together they have helped many Apple Computer users with a variety of computer related concerns. Concentrating on systems administration and hardware repairs over the last ten years, Ashley has become the islands Mac expert. So, as this book became ready for pre-production, Ashley was the obvious choice to make it camera ready.

Ronald Monterosso, Esq. - Contributor/Editor

Impact Of Colonial Law
On Genealogical and Historical Research

Born in Connecticut, Ronald Monterosso spent much of his professional career in New York City before moving to Martha's Vineyard. He graduated from Vassar College and later obtained a Juris Doctor from New York University School of Law. While an associate laywer he obtained a Masters of Law degree from New York University School of Law. Since coming to the Vineyard in 1985 he has done extensive research into Native American land titles on Chappaquiddick and Aquinnah. Ron has lectured on Native American history at The Vineyard Museum and co-founded NEART with Jay Segel. Together they conduct European research for Native American Tribes.

Dana Gaines - Contributor (Cartographer)

Dana Gaines was born and raised on Martha's Vineyard where he developed a deep respect for the natural world and a keen interest in human settlement history. He published his first illustrated map in 1983 and continues to create images, professionally, which are both decorative and educational. Dana writes he "is honored to contribute the map illustration for this project."

Mark Cohen -Executive Editor

Mark Cohen grew up on Cape Cod Massachusetts and has been coming to Martha's Vineyard since 1994. He attended the University of Massachusetts at Amherst where he majored in Anthropology. Now a performing musician and songwriter, Cohen has released two CDs of his own original music. He met Jay Segel in 1995 and the two eventually would collaborate on musical projects. Mark is a stickler for clarity, detail and economy of thought, and thus he was the logical choice for Executive Editor.

Joan Walsh -Contributor (Original Artwork)

Born in Ireland, Joan Walsh graduated with honors from the National College of Art and Design in Dublin. Before moving to Martha's Vineyard in 1989 she won many awards and exhibited frequently. In 1999 Joan was commissioned to paint a poster of Oak Bluffs' Flying Horses, the oldest working carousel in the U.S.A. Joan wrote and illustrated her first book, Precious Moments on Martha's Vineyard Part One, which was published in July of 2002.

Preface

The initial spark for this Native Vineyard genealogical history came from land research done at the Dukes County Registry of Deeds, for 313 acres in the north-central portion of Martha's Vineyard, called Sanchakantacket Neck. In the spring of 1986, I was living in Oak Bluffs, Massachusetts, on the island of Martha's Vineyard. One Friday afternoon, I stopped into a local realty office only to find the agent on the phone. As the call seemed doomed to continue for quite some time, my boredom grew and soon turned to fidgeting, then pacing. I found a cure in curiosity born of a very large green book on the conference table entitled "Oak Bluffs".

I began to page through the map section of this unwieldy book, finding my own house lot, then my name, address and particulars about my property in the owners section. Oddly, I kept coming across the designation "Owner Unknown" and thought how strange to have land with no known owner. The real estate agent continued to groom the caller as if he/she was a billionaire looking to buy the entire island and I was invisible. I let my curiosity wander back to the map section. Through the numbered designations, I was able to correlate the "Owner Unknown" citations with their locations. I took notes, while the phone call was concluding, with the idea of seeing if this land really did exist and what was on it.

In the ensuing months, I found my thoughts returning to "Owner Unknown" land. I decided to gather the information on these parcels of land using the town, county and state records. The classic way of assigning an owner to "Owner Unknown" land is to carry the neighboring titles back in time until a connection is discovered between the lot in question and its abutter. In most cases this process worked, but I was left with one very large tract that didn't respond to this method. Hearing that Martha's Vineyard was bought in 1641 by Thomas Mayhew, the next logical tack was to research the Mayhew purchases and follow the title forward. I was able to anchor my starting place by finding Mayhew's deed from James Forrett, agent to William, the Earl of Stirling.

Following Mayhew's title forward in time led me to my first encounters with the real owners of Martha's Vineyard, the Indians. I became immediately interested in these Native Islanders and began to keep track of all Indian related records in the Registry of Deeds. I went to the local historical society for additional reading material and found the acknowledged standard, Charles Banks' History of Martha's Vineyard Mass. I was surprised to find such a void as to the Native genealogies.

In 1990, I authored a book highlighting the various techniques involved in the aforementioned land title process called "Owner Unknown: Your guide to Real Estate Treasure Hunting". This work and its follow-up, were published by the Genealogical Publishing Company. (GPC) out of Baltimore, Maryland. The owner of GPC, Barry Chodak, and I became friends and began to research land titles. In late 1991, we added a freelance genealogist associated with the New England Historic Genealogical Society to the group, R. Andrew (Andy) Pierce.

Andy and I continued working on "Owner Unknown" land research and gathering documents related to the Martha's Vineyard Indians. In early March of 1992, we found ourselves at the Marriott Hotel in Providence, Rhode Island, awaiting the arrival of my second child, Victoria. We, included myself, my wife and son, my parents from Florida, my mother-In-Law from Michigan, Barry from Maryland, and Andy from Boston, all watching my wife's stomach and wondering. Thursday night, (one day before our daughter was born), while having dinner at the hotel restaurant, I showed Barry and Andy a crude sketch of some Vineyard Indian family trees. We all agreed that this topic was timely and largely uncovered, so Andy and I organized the previously gathered information and made a list of repositories to visit.

This book has taken us from California to The Netherlands, from Scotland to France, through speculation and debate, and back again to a different sort of delivery room. We have created an astounding map with the aboriginal names of Martha's Vineyard topography, uncovered bilingual Bibles, cited unrecognized Sachems, and given life to some of the oldest American lineages - several into the 1500's.

It has been a long and complex journey through the dust of five centuries to bring this book to light. The needless destruction by fire and flood of one-of-a-kind records at too many repositories urged us on through periods of frustration and absolute fatigue. I guess it's not the actual history, but the history of "historicide" which drove this book to press. This body of work is respectfully offered as an historical life preserver.

Individuals in the database section should be looked at as an incomplete puzzles of varying degrees. For one person we may have say 200 pieces and for another, perhaps just two or three. It should also be said that relevant information is still being found. As the new data is analyzed and compared to existing knowledge, the information presented herein may be modified significantly causing conflicts between this volume and those forthcoming. There were times that we wondered if we would ever finish. Well, we're still not done, but here's volume number one.

Introduction

Prior to the completion of this body of work, if one was studying local history, the standard reference was a three volume set of books titled the "History of Martha's Vineyard Mass." by Charles E. Banks, published in 1911. The first two volumes covered the general history of Dukes County and the annals of the six towns on the Vineyard. The third volume, according to Dr. Banks, included the complete genealogies of every family resident on Martha's Vineyard from 1641. No mention was made of the Wampanoag families, who were the settlers and resident owners of this island for time out of mind. In fact, these Native Vineyarders had been living here with a language, a culture, a political system, a religion, and an effective way of life for centuries. Banks made it seem as though the European immigrants had found a barren wilderness here in 1641 when they arrived. However, what they found was a fertile land which they promptly took, displacing its resident population. In 1602, Barthlolemew Gosnold, an English explorer changed the name of the island. This land, as two islands, already had names: Noepe and Capawick. Both belonged to the local Wampanoag people. Today, on the westernmost portion of the Vineyard, the tribal offices of the federally recognized Wampanoag of Gay Head/Aquinnah stand on a small portion of the very ground their ancestors have always occupied.

In 1641 about twenty able bodied Englishman and their families arrived to begin a settlement on the island. There were about three thousand Wampanoag who were residents of the Vineyard at that time. When the colonists arrived they did not know how to cultivate the land, use the ponds productively, fish in the ocean, or catch whales. These new residents had to be shown how to recognize and prepare edible herbs, fruits, and nuts as well as how to preserve these foods. They also needed to know the best location on which to build their homes. Had these Native Vineyarders not accepted, nurtured and educated these colonists in all these areas, the colonists likely would have died, and who knows what would have happened to our island and what would it be like today. Somehow, despite all of this, Banks could not find any Wampanoag families worthy of having their genealogies included in his book. This seems particularly hard to understand as these Native people were still quite visible at the time of the Banks publication.

The colonists had no opposition to their choice of prime location for the settlement except perhaps from within. They would not have to challenge Wampanoag farmers for the fertile land and coastal areas. The Wampanoag had cleared and cultivated for centuries and their knowledge of fishing and the sea was superb.

Thanks to the Great Spirit in his mighty wisdom that Jay and Andy recognized that the local Wampanoag bands were the rightful proprietors of this land. They recognized that the Native Vineyarders had a rich history worth researching, and research it they did. I can attest to the rigors of the search for records and their place in the big picture as I went on one of their many research trips abroad.

This document truly lives up to its intent of going beyond family life. Documents sited include land, judicial, military, maritime endeavors and religious history. The thoroughness with which the facts are presented is outstanding. It is an encouragement and an inspiration for Wampanoag to explore our heritage much more easily and professionally than we have been able to do previously.

A great deal of the hard search and integration of facts has been done for us in the manuscript. To acquire information the authors had to search through Indian and colonial records in the Registries of Deeds and Probate, town, county and state repositories nationwide, then national and regional libraries and archives in Europe. In fact, Dr. Segel said this book took him from California to Amersterdam, including England, Scotland and France, and has shed light on some of the oldest American lineages.

The book is the product of many years of searching through copious records and nearly indecipherable primary source material. It includes disputes, debt cases, letters, births, marriages, and death records. Account books, sea voyages, and other rare documents add a richness to the presentation. The text is so constructed to include and relate all these documents with the Native people themselves being the focal point. This makes doing our genealogies easier and more complete. Our land titles can now be traced with greater accuracy as can our own individual lineages. This document is the first comprehensive effort to help us become more familiar with our heritage and restore our peoples' rightful place in Vineyard , New England, and Native American history. Some of the records allow us to establish lineages back to the 1500's.

The arrival of Mayhew and company brought the concept of land sale to the island of Martha's Vineyard, totally changing life for the Wampanoag inhabitants. This compilation of documents will certainly help us to unscramble some of our problematic land titles. The appendices herein provide an easy access to genealogical and historical information of interest to all Native Americans, African Americans, and all persons with roots on Martha's Vineyard, Nantucket, New England, and New York. The Vineyard Chronology in particular allows us to view our little island in a worldly perspective, laying out the goings on here and events that influenced New England and the Native populations at large.

Thank you Dr. Segel and Mr. Pierce. You have given us records that we can use to gather information about our ancestors. Furthermore, you have given us something substantial, a basis for tribal pride. This volume 1 is so "together." The tedious aspect of doing genealogy has been simplified. It is a super source of information and a great means of how to do what you need to do to find out what you want to know.

About Volume 1

The material presented in this study is the distillate of intensive historical research conducted on native Martha's Vineyard over the past twelve years. This volume begins circa 1570, prior to English contact. It uses letters, deeds, wills, complaints, diaries, and other such records created at the start of the seventeenth century. The aforementioned documents reach back into pre-recorded Martha's Vineyard history chiefly to clarify ownership or boundary issues, often reciting previous owners, abutters, and relationships.

The gleaning of genealogical and historical pearls grows as does the organization of the towns, county, and political infrastructure of the island. Business, court and vital records are in place and put a somewhat more solid ground under the loosely woven family mats. Keep in mind that records before the nineteenth century are rare, spotty, poorly preserved and often disorganized. Furthermore, they were not created for genealogical purposes. However, hidden in these documents are clues to people's ages, birthplace, parentage, and other such relevant information. Gleanings were treated as if they were frames in a movie. Records relating to families were unearthed, studied and ordered logically, frame by frame, revealing a picture of sorts. Though incomplete and seemingly inconclusive, the additive truths of the collected frames dictate theories to be tested and often create truths of their own. This practice dubbed "lateral intelligence" is not an uncommon research technique to create most likely scenarios to fill in the story lines. Given that history is made every day, the arbitrary date of around 1800 has been breached several times as dictated by the extracts of documents used to further this effort.

Given the rarity of early Vineyard information, many of the first Vineyard records have little or no affiliation and will only be found in volume one. The other individuals cited will serve as an informational bridge between the initial data and the genealogical intensive volumes to come. Note that as new records are analyzed, there may be updated and perhaps conflicting data between the books.

How To Use This Book

The earliest records consulted for this volume date from around 1570, before the Indians had much contact with the English who were to impact their lives so completely. Records from the first European visits were found. These include: maps, reports, diaries, and letters. Later legal complaints against the natives, as well as deeds and wills, provided information on who owned the land, who abutted the land, who was related to the landowner, and who stole from him. Sometimes the complaints delineated complicated family relationships.

None of these records were created for genealogical purposes. The authors have sifted through the incidental notations, finding clues to names, parentage, age, and relationships. The main portion of this book is a compendium listing every Indian with Island connections whose name was to be found in these various records in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

Whether you intend to read this compendium straight through or want to find a particular person, you will be surprised at the wealth of information collected on and identifying over one thousand six hundred native Americans who lived on Martha's Vineyard before the year 1800.

Previous researchers of records before the nineteenth century have been told that there was little data available on anyone. However, the authors have discovered a great deal of information on the Native American population from the very early days of English settlement of the Island.

You will find a compilation of every Indian mentioned in the voluminous assortment of ancient documents cited. These include a large number of women. The next two chapters, the historical notes and Island chronology, present an important framework for the text. Reviewing these few pages will help you to put the people themselves into their appropriate time frame.

The listing of all the individuals is roughly chronological. They are numbered for easy reference, allowing you to find the known parents and children of a specific person quickly and easily. Note that family groupings are only indicated by specific references.

Use the Name Index to find a specific person. Search by surname, if it is known. For instance, Mary Pameck is #67. You will see that each person has a brief paragraph giving all known information about him or her, as well as the general sources for the data. There are also references to all known relatives. These references use the number for each person. For example "#67 was the wife of #66."

While the compendium does not gather the information on the whole family for you, you will be able to find ancestors and descendants of many of those people listed. Some of the families present only clues which research elsewhere may enlarge upon. In the text is found: "295 George Jonson of Chapoquidik, husband of Eliza #296, father of #297, #300, #5212 & #951" found in deeds 1771-74. "296 Eliza (Betty) Johnson... wife of George #295, mother of #297 & #300" from same deeds 1771-74. From the data given, George and Eliza are adults, married, with children. When you look at the data on the children, you realize that the children are also adults who are married, perhaps with families of their own. "#297 Hannah Porrage ... daughter of #295 & #296, wife of Simon #298..." data from various deeds 1771-85 "#298 Simon Porrage ... of ... Nantucket, husband of Hannah #297 ...1777; of Chapaquidick by 1782 ..." data from various deeds and probate records. Reading the data gathered on all the individuals mentioned, you can compile the following family group: #295 George Jonson b ca1715 d aft 1774. He lived on Chappaquiddick in Edgartown. He married Eliza (Betty), having at least two children by her: 297 Hannah b before 1740, married Simon Porrage of Nantucket 300 Patience b before 1740, married Samuel Peters of Edgartown, she was living in 1765. George Jonson may have had two other children found in the records: #512 George Johnson Jr. married Elizabeth, having children. (and possibly): #951 Isaac Johnson of Gay Head who married Mercy Tolman, having children. You will notice that relationships are often prefaced by "probably" and "possibly." In part this is because of the difficulty in identifying a particular person in several different records at a time period when the clerks might spell the name many different ways within the same document. Some information may also be interpreted in more than one way, given the differences of Indian custom versus English practice.

Islanders were fortunate that the local native population was either naturally more peaceful than their mainland cousins or less likely to be stirred to warfare. The battles on the Island between English and Indian seem to be limited to matters of land and private property. This book is written from the Indian point of view, a decided departure from other books about this period available today.

Dukes County Registry of Probate Book 1/107

Records, Repositories, and Resources

To date, no serious effort has ever been made to present the complete historical record of the Wampanoag communities on Martha's Vineyard. Charles Banks' History of Martha's Vineyard Mass. (1911) goes into great detail on the European colonists and their descendants (the entire third volume is devoted to their genealogies). However, Banks is woefully inadequate in his treatment of the Wampanoags and their contributions to the island's history. Most historians of that period had a significantly European bias; Banks and others have claimed that documents relating to the Wampanoags are too sketchy and incomplete to present a complete chronological history.

By presenting their history within the context of family genealogies, we aim to show that in fact the Vineyard Wampanoags have a rich and documented heritage. Previous historians have always presented their findings within a "tribal", or collective, context with many examples from folklore. While incorporating some of that folklore into the genealogies, our focus will be on the facts: names, dates, family connections and known accomplishments of each individual within the community. The "collective" context, concentrating on these communities' attempts to survive amidst European encroachment, often ignores the fact that individual rights and one's family connections were of considerable importance in the Wampanoag culture, and often led to disputes. Disagreements were particularly centered around land, a precious commodity within the confines of this small island; even before the Europeans' arrival, land use was often determined by inheritance rights, as evidenced in land and court records.

As professional genealogists, our intention is to seek out every possible source of written information on the Vineyard Wampanoags to include in their family histories. However, since these sources touch on subjects beyond average family life, we expect the scope of, and interest in, this work to go beyond being just a genealogical study. Our book will be a boon not only to historians and cultural anthropologists, but also, we hope, to students of American judicial, military, maritime, and religious history as well. The precise spots of long vanished wigwams in deed descriptions might aid ongoing archaeological studies on the Vineyard. Even most genealogies of European American families, which have been widely published for over a century, do not draw upon as many manuscript sources as we have, making this one of the first projects of its kind. We found it necessary to explore these sources not only to fill in as many "gaps" as possible in the genealogies but also to present those in the historical Wampanoag community as ordinary human beings, adapting and contributing to a wider culture.

Our sources include: land records and deeds (kept in Dukes County since 1665), mortgages, some leases and wills, and depositions (often by elderly people about land boundaries and previous owners). In addition to those found at the registry in Edgartown, a number of unrecorded deeds have been discovered at the Dukes County Historical Society. The land records of neighboring Nantucket, Bristol and Plymouth counties have also turned up a number of Vineyarders who married into those communities.

Court records kept in Dukes County since 1671 include record books, writs, executions, summaries and depositions. The "Suffolk Files" collection in the Massachusetts State Archives has a wealth of Vineyard cases from 1696 to ca. 1800, many involving land disputes, which were tried in the Superior Court of Judicature at Barnstable (the original records of that court were destroyed in 1827, but post 1827 records contain a number of Vineyard cases, which were appealed at Barnstable until 1859).

Many Dukes County court files have been dispersed to a number of locations including the Library of Congress, the New England Historic Genealogical Society and the Massachusetts Historical Society; every effort has been made to collect copies of these. The court records of Barnstable, Bristol, Plymouth and Nantucket counties have also been searched, and were found to contain a number of cases involving Vineyarders. Those of Nantucket include a large number of disputes (mostly debt cases) during the first half of the 18th century and seem reflective not only of the first "boom" in the whaling industry (which employed virtually all of the male Indians in coastal Massachusetts), but also of the frequency of travel and of family connections between the Indian communities on the Vineyard and on Nantucket.

Civil responsibility proceedings often produce genealogically significant material. For instance, an 1816 case brought before the Bristol County Supreme Judicial Court by the town of Westport against the town of Chilmark, disputed municipal responsibility and the right of a pauper of Vineyard Wampanoag ancestry to reside in the former town. The case produced several depositions by elderly Gay Head Indians reciting several generations of Indian and African-American ancestry which are not found in any other source.

Probate Records (kept in Dukes County since 1665) contain wills, administrations and estate divisions; though the Wampanoags are not as well covered here as in the land and court records, dozens of instruments have been found for them from the 1600's onward. Lists of debtors to (mostly non Indians') estates were frequently found to include Indians; the estate of tavern keeper Robert Cathcart, probated in 1720, lists 110 individuals known to be Wampanoags. Records of the Massachusetts Legislative and Executive branches (kept since the colonial era in the early 1600's) are mainly housed at the Massachusetts State Archives in Boston. They include Acts, Resolves, unpassed House and Senate legislation, and matters acted upon by the Governor and Council. Most documents before the American Revolution have been catalogued as part of the "Massachusetts Archives" series and include three volumes devoted exclusively to Indian matters. Post Revolutionary records are arranged in file packets. These papers include petitions from Indian communities and individuals, depositions, correspondence and accounts of the guardians who were appointed by the Government to look after the Indians' interests. We have searched not only for records of the Island's Wampanoag inhabitants but also their white neighbors, and found in the latter category several documents which also relate to Indians.

Important information was discovered in the account books of Vineyard businessmen and tradesmen, the most notable of which are those of John Allen (from 1735 through 1765) and of David Look (from 1800 through 1830). These two storekeepers dealt extensively with their Wampanoag neighbors, as did a number of others from the mid-1700's through the early 1800's. These accounts (mostly housed at the Dukes County Historical Society in Edgartown) help establish the time frame in which an individual lived, whether he married, had children, and what sea voyages he undertook. They are also instrumental in illustrating what an average family of that era depended upon for food and supplies. Several Vineyarders were found in a number of Nantucket account books which were found at the Nantucket Historical Society.

Vital Records of births, marriages and deaths were kept in New England towns since the 1600's. The three original Vineyard towns of Edgartown, Tisbury and Chilmark have published their surviving records through 1850. After 1850, they are found in the town halls as well as the Massachusetts State Archives. They are a limited but valuable source for the Island Wampanoags, whose marriages began being recorded in the 1750's, though not their births and deaths. The latter are found sporadically, mostly for Edgartown and Tisbury, until the 1850's when the Christiantown community in Tisbury and the Chappaquiddick community in Edgartown began more complete registration with the towns. The large community at Gay Head did not begin registration until its inception as a town in 1871, though a number of Indian marriages since the 1750's are found in the Chilmark vital records. We have also conducted a broad search of the vital records of Nantucket and those mainland communities connected with the Vineyard, and found an additional number of records, largely marriages, for the Wampanoags.

Census Records of the Vineyard Wampanoag population begin with a 1792 Census of Gay Head, showing heads of households, numbers of persons and the percentage of other races within families. Though the Island Indian communities were not included in the Federal decennial census records 1790 through 1860, those for 1800 through 1830 record those families headed by non-Indians; owing to intermarriage, these include a fair proportion of the Indian population, especially at Chappaquiddick. The 1828 land settlements for Christiantown and Chappaquiddick list all family members. In 1848 and 1859, censuses of all Massachusetts Indian communities (including Gay Head, Deep Bottom, Christiantown and Chappaquiddick) were compiled in response to Acts of the Legislature; the Chappaquiddick tribe appears in the Massachusetts state censuses of 1855 and 1865, and the Christiantown tribe also appears on the 1865 census. In 1871 a detailed special census for Gay Head was compiled from Richard L. Pease's notes; from 1870 onward, the decennial censuses record all of the Vineyard's Wampanoag descendants.

The numerous petitions and guardian accounts submitted by and for the Vineyard Indians from ca. 1700 to ca. 1870, found in legislative collections and other sources, are effectively censuses of their communities, though they do not record family members and ages.

Records of the New Bedford Customs House contain whaling ships' crew lists and seamans' protection papers, both collections dating from the early 1800's. These have been preserved at the New Bedford Public Library with a card index showing the names, birthplaces, height, weight, eye and hair color, name of ship, duration of voyage, and salary, for each individual. Since virtually all able-bodied males in the Vineyard's Indian communities served on whaling ships, these are a valuable source. A few lists for Nantucket also survive at the Nantucket Historical Society.

Military Records include a number of published and unpublished sources documenting those who served in land and sea campaigns from the earliest colonial adventures through the Civil War. The Massachusetts State Archives contains muster rolls from the 1710 expedition to Annapolis Royal to the French & Indian War excursions in the 1750's and 1760's; these are card indexed, and include the names, dates and places of service, and sometimes ages of several Vineyard Indians. The latter often served as scouts, sentinels or "Bateaux men". The Archives also contains some petitions from these soldiers, claiming compensation.

Two multi-volume collections, Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors In the Revolutionary War and Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors In the Civil War, contain data on several Vineyard men of Wampanoag ancestry. Another large collection, Naval Documents of the American Revolution, offers some records of those who served as privateers (documentation of the latter is often elusive). Manuscript sources such as letters, family histories, unrecorded wills, leases, indentures, petitions, deeds, court records and vital records, have been found at numerous historical societies and university libraries. These include the Dukes County Historical Society, the Nantucket Historical Society, the New England Historic Genealogical Society, the Massachusetts Historical Society, the American Antiquarian Society, the Peabody Essex Museum, the Houghton Library at Harvard University, the Mugar Library at Boston University, all in Massachusetts; the John Carter Brown Library at Brown University, Providence RI; the Library of Congress in Washington DC, and the Guildhall Library in London. The collections of numerous other institutions have also been surveyed for Vineyard data. The National Union Manuscript Catalog and the National Inventory of Documentary Sources were of some help in locating collections, but many could remain at local historical societies or in private hands.

Native Writings in Massachusett by Dr. Ives Goddard and Dr. Kathleen Bragdon was of inestimable value to our study. This two volume set collected (from a number of institutes and libraries) and translated most of the known documents in the Massachusett language (including deeds, wills, depositions, petitions, family and Bible records, and dating from the late 1600's to the late 1700's).

Newspapers, mainly (but not limited to) the Vineyard Gazette which commenced publication as the Island's first newspaper in 1846, often recorded births, marriages and deaths which (particularly in the case of Gay Head) were not registered with the civil authorities. Summaries of cases heard at each session of the Dukes County courts helped us to find valuable clues. Stories of local interest offered many personal aspects of Vineyard Indians, that are otherwise not forthcoming from official documents. The early Boston newspapers have some data on Vineyard Indian communities and individuals, as do those of New Bedford, Nantucket and other surrounding towns.

Religious records include those of the New England Company and its subsidiary, the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel..., which oversaw the ecclesiastical activities of the Vineyard Indians from the early 1700's to the early 1800's. The bulk of these records were found at the Guildhall Library in London and the New England Historic Genealogical Society in Boston. Smaller religious collections were found at the Peabody Essex Museum and at the Massachusetts Historical Society. Letters, journals, and especially accounts of yearly payments to ministers, magistrates and deacons in each Vineyard community have all helped to fill in family data.

Published works begin with the accounts of Epanow's capture by, and escape from, English sea captains in the early 1600's; continue with Eliot's and the Mayhews' accounts of converted Indians in the 1600's, valuable excerpts from The Diary of Samuel Sewall in 1702 and 1716 recounting visits to the religious Indians of the Vineyard, and the diary of the Vineyard's own Rev. William Homes, published in the NEHGS Register; and, of course, Experience Mayhew's opus, Indian Converts... (1727). A comprehensive listing of primary and secondary sources, including rare books, web sites and manuscripts, can be found on page 632 in the Bibliography.

Impact Of Colonial Law
On Genealogical and Historical Research

For the last few years I have occasionally assisted the authors of this work in analyzing documents from the early colonial period based on the legal system and laws in effect at the time the particular document was created. I am consistently amazed by the depth of their research and the complexity of the questions that some of these documents present. I do not want to stand for long in between the reader and the outstanding work that follows, so I am emerging from the shadows of this supporting role only briefly to provide some information on colonial legal system that may be of help in using or understanding the research and information that follows.

The most difficult task faced by modern researchers in understanding colonial legal issues is to separate themselves from the current legal system that has become such an integral part of our everyday lives. Few people realize how much of the modern legal system has become so ingrained in our minds that we simply take for granted that it has always been there. Curiously, the task of separating the legal systems of the past and present is most difficult for lawyers who tend to apply fundamental modern legal principles as a reflex action to any fact pattern, even if that fact pattern arose in 1640. That is why I have found that the key to a successful analysis of any document or set of facts under colonial law is to forget everything (or at least most) of what you know about current legal principles and become for the moment a solicitor in service of the Royal Courts.

So, for example, in analyzing whether two royal grants or patents of land are intended to cover the same area or different locations, the researcher's reflex reaction is to attempt to interpret these two grants as affecting different areas, because if we were to read them otherwise, then the second grant would work a taking of land from the first grantee without due compensation. This, as everyone today knows, is a violation of the Fifth Amendment.

The problem with that analysis is obvious given the warnings

I have just provided, namely that there was no Fifth Amendment and indeed no constitution in 1640 or in 1690 or at any time during the colonial period so in analyzing these documents we cannot assume that the two grants do not overlap. The trick, however, is to avoid falling into this analytical trap when that warning is not so fresh in your mind. That is why the proper analysis of colonial documents requires constant vigilance against allowing modern legal concepts to find their way into your thinking.

The legal fact of the time was that the power of the sovereign to dispose, or "redispose," of lands in the Kingdom, especially in the Colonies, was fettered only by political, not legal, considerations. That is why in deciding where to place these two grants "on the earth" we need to check the political situation in England at the time of each of the two grants. Remember also that the expression "keeping your head when all about you are losing theirs" had a much different (and more literal) meaning in 17th Century England than it does today. So in returning to our hypothetical analysis of these two documents we need to see where the first grantee's "head was at" around the time of the second grant. Was it on his shoulders or on display on a stake at the Tower of London? That is why the authors of this comprehensive work have added a worldwide Time Line which describes relevant worldwide and Vineyard events in a neat chronological order. I cannot begin to describe what a valuable tool this chronology is. I commend it to you in your own research and suggest that you always keep it at the ready. This is an invaluable resource reference for researchers and for any student of history. The amount of time required to compile accurately the facts it represents (and thus the time it saves the reader in that effort) should never be underestimated nor should its value in understanding the context of any colonial document.

Of course the point of this work is to remind all of us that there was in fact a complex Native society (indeed multiple societies) and legal systems already in place and functioning by the time Mayhew arrived on Martha's Vineyard. Yet for better or worse the only written records we have of the Vineyard from this time are European. Therefore even Native American genealogical research must look in large part (although by no means exclusively) to these records. In attempting to research our collective Vineyard past in these records we must also keep in mind that there was no European legal system in place on the island when Mayhew landed. This fact becomes very important in understanding Euro-Native American relations and disputes. It is also important in determining where to look for relevant records.

Those of us who have endured the tedium of a legal education will certainly be familiar with the didactic example used repeatedly by law professors which begins with something to the effect of, "Assume you have landed on a deserted island...." In law school parlance, this phrase was simply a signal that in your analysis of the problem to follow you would not be bound by any precedents from any jurisdictions, so few students took the time to mentally put themselves in that difficult position. Similarly, few people have actually stopped to consider the impact of Mayhew's situation from the point of view of the complete absence of a familiar legal system when he first landed on the Vineyard. To understand this situation, and guide your research accordingly, you do indeed have to imagine yourself beginning a new life in a remote place with no courthouse, no newspaper, no registry of deeds, no probate court and no town hall. Where do you keep records of land transactions, probates, and the like? Where do you publish public notices of meetings? How do you bring a lawsuit and to where do you take an appeal?

In researching early Martha's Vineyard history, even Native American history, it is imperative to remember that the answers to these questions are not always obvious, and often must be found by locating the trails blazed by the Mayhews or the parties in control. Wills, reports, court record, and proprietor's notices can be found in the registry of deeds because in the early going this may have been the only place that provided everyone with "constructive notice" of matters with public implications, just as the registry provides posted records to everyone of land transactions today. Similarly, before the creation of the registry of deeds, and even thereafter, land records are often found in the Town of Edgartown's Proprietors' Records, as are other documents.

The beauty of the work done by the authors of this project is that they took the time to place themselves in Mayhew's shoes and those of the Vineyard Natives. This better allowed them to understand what it meant to start a new European settlement in a remote and virgin (from a Eurocentric perspective) area while respecting the customs and government of the aboriginal inhabitants. As such, the authors provide a far more complete and accurate picture of the Vineyard's history than can be found in any other previous work.

In doing their research the authors avoided the trap of thinking as a modern person would. They checked the county court house (amongst many other local repositories) for early wills, including Native American probate proceedings, and were rewarded with a wealth of genealogical, geographical, and historical documentation. They went to Maine because they understood that the Gorges land patent included both the Vineyard and Maine. Dr. Segel and I have spent quite a bit of time searching repositories in London, France, and the Netherlands because the colonists from these respective countries were the earliest recorders of Native American history. Consequently, we have found a wealth of relavant information abroad.

I can only suggest that when using this book, one pay close attention to the authors' well documented sources. There is information here that is not readily obvious, but this should inspire some original thinking as to where Vineyard records may have ended up. Keep in mind in this regard that libraries, museums, and private collectors all over the world acquire and hold ancient documents, many of which relate to the Vineyard and the surrounding area.

One further area where colonial legal knowledge can be important is for the researcher to realize that early Vineyard history unfolds against the English feudal system of manors and that indeed the early Mayhews were considered Lords of the Manor. This system has had an impact on land issues and issues of descent and distribution for those dying without a Will. In analyzing probates for direct genealogical information as can be found in next of kin and schedules of beneficiaries, or indirect clues as in, inheritance, mortuary choice or informant of death, one can discover much in the verbiage and dispensations. For example, it is important to remember that in the early going the Manoral system followed the rule of primogeniture, so that during the early colonial period the eldest son always received a double share, or twice the share of his siblings. This is important to remember in analyzing relationships between surviving family members, and overlooking this rule has led other researchers to incorrect conclusions in an attempt to explain this discrepancy in shares. It is beyond the scope of this introduction (to say nothing of being very tedious) to lecture on the rules of descent and distribution, but suffice it to say that they frequently change over time and in interpreting the wealth of information in any probate estate it is very important to pay close attention to the date that the decedent died and to be certain to have the rules applicable at that time. Most probate courts would have this information. If they don't, then a trip to that court's law library would be well worth the time.

Another quirk of the Manor system relates to land issues. Researchers should not be surprised to see a deed coming from a Mayhew for a tract of land in which he had no apparent interest. Such a deed was an approbation of the transfer of title by the Lord of the Manor inasmuch as all titles were held for the benefit of the King, and the Lord of the Manor was his local representative. Nonetheless this rule was ignored as often as it was followed, so the absence of such a deed should not be shocking either.

The issue of the oft disregarded approbation of the Lord of the Manor for transfers of land between European settlers[1] in the American colonies should not be confused with the strictly observed requirement that the consent of the Crown or its local representative was required as to "transfers" of land between Native American tribes and any European settler[1]. This was not, as it may first appear, a measure to protect Native American interests. Rather this law requiring the approbation of Native deeds developed in the American colonies because European settlers were obtaining competing deeds from different members of the same Tribe and then squabbling or even killing each other in disputes over title. Thus the Crown acted to keep the peace and to prevent the loss of valuable fighting men who were desperately needed to fight the French or hostile Native Tribes.

It is the background provided by these colonial laws that demonstrates why these early deeds, especially Native American "deeds," can contain such a wealth of historical and genealogical information. It stands to reason that the English authorities had to show that they had "done their homework" in determining the real Sachem of the Tribe or the persons actually empowered to sign for the Tribe. Therefore these "deeds" contain a wealth of genealogical and historical information including information about the Tribe's social and political structure . This information is generally trustworthy because the authorities knew that if they had made the wrong choice the actual authority would soon rise up to assert the invalidity of the document signed by the impostor(s) with the overwhelming majority of the Tribe standing behind him (or them), such that it would become self evident that the deed conveyed nothing.

On the other hand the researcher must always keep in mind that the Native political systems did not neatly coincide with the English political system and yet the English of this time never took the trouble to understand the Native systems[2]. Rather, the English would transpose their system onto the Native system. Therefore references to Indian "Princes" or "Kings"or "Queens" need to be taken with a grain of salt. Even in Native testimonies regarding a Tribe's history such terms are used because this is the only word which the translator could use. Yet these ethnocentric references, if put in context and taken as analogies, can be helpful to determine some aspects of the relationships existing in the Tribe at the time. However, the reader must be careful to read between the lines and not take the text literally when clearly English political terms are used. It is critical to read these documents against the backdrop of the political events in Europe at the time (including the English laws of the time). So once again I would remind the reader and the researcher to keep the authors' Time Line close at hand.

Now it is time to fade once again into the background of this work. I hope I have helped in the better understanding and interpretation of ancient documents. However, any further text here would only stand between the reader and the exciting work ahead.

Notes

1. There is justifiably much debate about whether such "transfers" were understood by the Tribe to be a parting with their ownership. For now it will have to suffice to take general notice of this significant issue and recognize that the evidence continues to mount that no outright transfer was ever understood or intended. These ancient deeds, which have for centuries been ignored, have been shown by these authors to be veritable treasure troves of information about Native American leaders and societies.

2. This point once again demonstrates why the Native "deeds" were most likely not actual conveyances. There is no reason to assume (and every reason not to assume) that the Native legal systems would have coincidentally developed the same legal concepts of ownership of land as had evolved in England. It appears that natural boundaries, such as rivers or mountain ranges, acted as legal boundaries (by act of war to defend the territory if nothing else). The concept of individual ownership of smaller tracts of land within these large naturally bounded territories seems to be unheard of in Native cultures. It is therefore unlikely that Sachems and Tribal Elders could have understood that they were "selling" a part of the Tribe's traditional territory to a group of individual white settlers.

European Westward Efforts, Natives, and the Vineyard

Most of us initially come to history as a requirement of school. Often, events are laid out in a vacuum with little or no perspective. The regurgitation of facts may well be a triumph in discipline, but it does little to stimulate the virgin senses of the elementary school student. Indeed, interest can wane in the web of complex details and tedium, though without any background even the clearest picture has no perspective. So, with that in mind, and bearing in mind that the shortest distance between two points is a straight line, the shortest (historical) way to Martha's Vineyard is through a chain of events. The following is a cursory presentation of historical facts and theories. While identifying events like links on a chain, the focus is on the connections, both what gave rise to said events, and what these experiences themselves inspired. The European discoveries and English colonization of Martha's Vineyard is at the end of this chain.

The subject breaks neatly into two categories: western discovery and European expansion. The world framework has always been a battlefield, a place to hold contests and display winners. As such, discovery and expansion are best viewed as modern-day board games. History is the record; riches, power and influence, the goals.

Trade and exploration were luxuries of a stable home environment and mastery of marine technology. Protected by natural barriers, the Norsmen could focus both mind and money outward while their European counterparts were involved with internal struggles for survival, fortification, and organization. The Norsemen are the first verifiable visitors to attempt a colony in North America. What drove these mysterious and somewhat larger-than-life mariners to leave the comforts of home and seek adventure?

Eric the Red, a Norsman of some stature and an alledgedly aggressive attitude, had worn out his welcome but retained rights to claim land in nearby Iceland. After more violence in Iceland, Eric sailed west and colonized Greenland in the late tenth century circa 982 AD. Some say that his son Lief was driven to seafaring by habit or adventure, but colonization and timber for boatbuilding were more likely his main motivations. Eventually, Lief Erickson discovered "Vinland" and attempted a colony there, however he eventually returned to Greenland. The large population of "Skraelings" (Native North Americans) and the deaths of many of Lief's party, including his brother, are thought to have been the largest influences on Erikson's decision to abandon his new settlement. After Erikson's departure, the eastern shores of this new world remained quiet for centuries, but the news of Erikson's voyages formed the foundation of another link down the chain.

For the next three centuries, the European nations of France, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Netherlands, Sweden, and England, crafted their sociopolitical infrastructure. At the time, exploration, especially westward, was but an amusement of dreamers, a dream of the downtrodden, and a future conquest of the wealthy. Well founded stories continued to circulate about Portuguese fisherman off a distant westward coastline seeking Cod fish, but it was the adventures of Polo, Diaz, exotic goods, and the slave trade that focused the world once again on the importance of long distance exploration. In fact, to achieve wealth, influence and power, a country must be marine competent and "budgetarily" committed to the sea. The aforementioned countries backed, what we call, the tertiary explorers in the fifteenth, sixteenth, and seventeenth centuries, the likes of Magellan, De Gama, Pizarro, Cortez, Ponce, Columbus, Cabot, Smith, Verrazano, Cartier, Alarcon, Hudson, Block, Frobisher and Gosnold to name a famous few. These crown and/or company sponsored expeditions were designed to discover better travel routes, expand trade, and seek wealth. Secondary objectives such as conversion and subjugation of native populations increased in importance as colonization became a prime motive for these westward voyages.

The foregoing events form the backdrop of European expansion to the Americas, and begin Native American recorded history. This was a time of religious intolerance, fierce competition, strategy, zeal, conquest, prejudice, and one-upsmanship. And as the discovery portion of history is likened to America's favorite board game Monopoly, expansion seems to emulate the international board craze, Chess. To these eyes, expansion looks like separately evolving chess matches, where land masses are the checkered battlegrounds between European powers, with the natives serving as both buffers and pawns. And whether they were looked upon as children, savages, kings, enemies, curiosities, or prizes, they were most definitely players in these games.

Highlighting the mind set of the day illuminates the historical chain of events. Growing up in Genoa, Christopher Columbus was weaned on tales of countryman Marco Polo and trade in exotic lands to the east. The muslim blockade of sorts made travel to Asia difficult and would prove to be a motivator of Columbus as merchant and mariner. Allegedly,

Columbus found himself in Portugal after a shipwreck, where the local fisherman had been venturing westward into the dark seas of the Atlantic. Concepts and ideas of going west to Asia filled Columbus. After defeating the Moors at Granada, Ferdinand and Isabella presided over a unified Christian Spain and began considering trade and riches beyond their borders. This was timely for Columbus and his ideas. By pointing the way west and "discovering America" he began a whole new series of chess matches in this new world. Ten years after the Columbus' first interaction with Native Americans in 1492, Sebastian Cabot (sailing for England in 1496-7) brought Native North Americans or Indians from Newfoundland to the court of King Henry VII. Not to be outdone, France sent Captain Thomas Aubert Northwest in 1508 where he discovered the St. Lawrence River. He also brought natives from the area back to France. Starting in 1510, Spain actively engaged in exploration about Puerto Rico. In the year 1513 Juan Ponce de Leon, a member of the Columbus party to the new world, sailed to and explored Florida.

In 1524 Verrazano, a Florentine sailing for France, traveled from South Carolina to Maine discovering modern day New York Bay and Cape Cod. With the subsequent expeditions of Cartier, France had taken full advantage of England's political and religious turmoil under King Henry VIII, and established a firm foothold in northern North America. Spain enjoyed a clear European exclusivity in and around Florida under the command of De Soto and Muscoso from 1539-42 as documented contemporaneously by Inca Garcilasso La Vega. France redoubled their efforts in the New World, targeting this same Florida/Carolina area with Huguenot Jean Ribault and company in 1562. Finally, in 1558 when Queen Elizabeth was coronated and restored stability, England was ready once again to turn attention to the world stage. A northwest trade route for better access to exotic and much sought after far east goods was vital to Britain.

The subjugation of the new world also took on religious significance as the chess game pitted Catholic France and Spain against Protestant England. The Franciscans enjoyed a monopoly on the Indians west of the Mississippi while the French Jesuit movement took hold in northern America thanks to policies allowing individuals to marry into the native communities. The English had their work cut out for them. Elizabeth sent Frobisher, Cavendish, and Davis to explore, while instructing Walter Raleigh to annex and colonize Virginia. In two attempts, Raleigh was unsuccessful in establishing a working colony. The last days of Queen Elizabeth I would be marked by the historic voyage of Bartholomew

Gosnold.

On May 17th, 1602, Gosnold and crew arrived off the southeastern shore of Capawick, which he dubbed Martha's Vineyard. The eighteenth through the twentieth they made their way east, and then north, keeping Chappaquiddick on their left. May 21st Gosnold sailed on, reaching the northeastern outskirts of present day Oak Bluffs by nightfall. The next two days found them passing Oak Bluffs, Tisbury, and Chilmark on their left and the Elizabeth Islands on their right. The night of the May 23rd was spent anchored off Menemsha while the 24th they passed the "Dover Cliffs," modern day Aquinnah, and put up at Cuttyhunk.

As England passed from the house of Tudor to James I and the house of Stuart, uniting Scotland and England, English maritime expeditions to the west increased dramatically. British captains, navigators and others such as Pring, Smith, Weymouth, Challons, Harlow, Popham, Gilbert, Hanam, Dermer, Mason, Rocraft, Hunt and Hobson would visit New England in the coming years. They were not alone. New England being the new chess board, the English were haunted and challenged by both the French and the Dutch. Champlain's sailed to New England for the French in 1606 and he named Martha's Vineyard, La Soupconneuse (the suspicious).

After Gosnold's initial expedition to Buzzard's Bay, Capawick reentered history. Both Sir Ferdinando Gorges and Captain John Smith describe the kidnapping of Epenow, a "savage" of Capawick. Sir Gorges, with the backing of Henry, the Earl of Southampton, employed Captain Edward Harlow to conduct a more thorough exploration of the Islands around Cape Cod. Harlow would detain three natives of Cape Cod; Pechmo, Monopet, and Pekenimne. Pechmo actually escaped, but Harlow proceeded with his instructions to "Capawe" where this Englishman captured Coneconam and Epenow.

We spent considerable time and resources checking these accounts. We made repeated visits to historical repositories, laboriously checked secondary sources, and conferred with other historians. Ultimately, we discovered a curious manuscript in the British Library. Attached to an unsigned log of a trip to New England circa 1660, was an earlier unsigned and undated account of the northeastern coast of the new continent. This journal begins with a geographical description of Labrador's journey down to the Merrimack. It includes one line notations of Sachems and rivers in the aboriginal tongue, information likely garnered by Mentoermit, a Native American interpreter of these proceedings. Bypassing the Boston and Plymouth Harbor areas, heading more directly to Cape Cod, the scribe noted the Islands of Nateca (Nantucket), Toucanoke, Akeucanack (Muskeget), and Capawick (called the largest of the Islands). A more verbose discussion of Sachems and Rivers resumed and ended with Capawick. Based on the language, Sachems, instructions, concentration, and detail on Capawick, we believe the older of the two voyage legends was used as a guide and was the record of Captain Edward Harlow's 1611 expedition to New England. This theory is supported by other noted scholars. And if indeed we are correct, this document also provides us with the earliest ancestors of the eastern Sachemdoms of Martha's Vineyard. Wavenot is presumptively the Sachem of Chappaquiddick and Tadosheme probably Sachem of Nunepog, with an estimable birth year range between 1555-70 if they are the fathers of Pakepanessoo and Towanquatick, respectively. In the less likely event that they are the grandfathers to the aforementioned Sachems, their estimable birth year range shifts chronologically backward to as early as 1530.

Also about the year 1611 and again the following year, the Dutch sent Adriaen Block and Hendrick Christiansen through the New England area to Manhattan. England, in about the year 1613, sent Henry Challons to sea with Epenow and other Indians of New England. Captian Block of The Netherlands' returned to the area in 1614. He explored Buzzard's Bay and came upon Martha's Vineyard calling it Texel. The English returned in force in the year of 1614, with the push of Sir Ferdinando Gorges sending the celebrated John Smith, the infamous Thomas Hunt and one Captain Hobson. After his interrogation of Epenow, late in 1613, Gorges states that Capawick is none other than Gosnold's Martha's Vineyard. Allegedly, after hearing of gold on Capawick, Gorges hired Captain Hobson, with the approbation and financial support of Henry, Earl of Southampton, to journey back to the Island with Epenow in tow. Upon reaching his home shores, Epenow makes good his escape. Epenow showed up again with regards to Thomas Dermer. Upon Dermer's visit to the Vineyard circa 1619, he apparently fought with Epenow and his confederates, escaping with wounds that would eventually claim his life in the colony of Virginia. Epenow may have appeared one last time as a signer on the 1621 Oath of Allegiance, but this is still somewhat hypothetical.

After the colonies of Jamestown and Sagahadoc were colonized, the Puritans, who had left England for the Netherlands, returned to Great Britain. They then sailed for what would become Plymouth Bay Colony and a new life in 1620. From 1622-35, Sir Ferdinando Gorges worked through the Privy Council and the Plymouth Company to obtain and solidified title to the Province of Maine and the islands about Cape Cod, including Capawick, alias Martha's Vineyard. We believe that the true native name for this Island is Nope and that the name Capawick was assigned by the British because of the aforementioned Epanow who was likely captured from around the Capepoag area and interviewed by Gorges himself.

Secretary of State under King Charles I, William Alexander (Earl of Stirling), thought he held Martha's Vineyard as part of his grant to Long Island. Upon the Earl's death in 1640, his agent, James Forret, granted planting and inhabitation rights on Martha's Vineyard to Thomas Mayhew, 23 Oct., 1641. The 25th day Oct., 1641 Mayhew and son were granted similar rights from Richard Vines, Gentleman Steward to Sir Gorges. The younger Thomas Mayhew went to the Vineyard in the following year, becoming both teacher and Missionary to these natives. With the English patent rights vested in the Mayhews, the native rights held by the six Chief Sachems of Nope, organization, education, communication, cooperation, compromise, and eventually, a legal system became a necessity. These legal and ecclesiastical materials such as deeds, court records, registers, and logs, account for almost the entire body of seventeenth and eighteenth knowledge about the indigenous people of Martha's Vineyard.

The Native Vineyard Language

The native language of northeastern North America was largely Algonquin. This is one of twelve phyla of Indian languages identified by Voegelin and Greenberg in North and South Americas. As is the case for many linguistic groups, macro-Algonquin subdivides into many regional dialects. The one that identifies our target area is Massachusett. We are fortunate that many scholars, contemporaneous and modern, have studied and written about the Island dialect. Most notable was Experience Mayhew, whose ancestors colonized Martha's Vineyard throughout the 1640's. As a child Mayhew learned well the mother tongue of those indigenous people he would later convert and minister to, both on and off island. In a letter found at the Maine Historical Society dated 20 March, "1721-22", Experience writes "To Speak ye truth I think most of ye Indians, not to say all of ym, betwixt Canada, and New Spain inclusively, do speak what was originally one and ye Same Language". He added later that he had spoken with an Indian of South Carolina and could understand most of his words. Curiously enough, he does point out that when visiting the Indians in Connecticut Colony, he had trouble understanding their discourse. Perhaps this phenomenon occurred because of Iroquoian linguistic influences coming from their western neighbors, the Mohawks. Evidence of the Vineyard Indian language exists in deeds, wills, notes, and other such public and private papers. The best collection and translation of these documents can be found in Goddard & Bragdon's Native Writings in Massachusett published in 1988 by the American Philosophical Society.

When in London, we were lucky enough to find and copy Experience Mayhew's bilingual Psalter used for religious instruction of the praying Indian children. This was an amazing find that provided many word-to-word translations of the Martha's Vineyard dialect. There is a copy now in tribal hands at Aquinnah and one in Edgartown at the Martha's Vineyard Museum. Of the Algonquin mother language, Mayhew adds, "I think it good and regular." It includes many examples of nouns, verbs and conjugations.

In the 1670's, after years of learning the native language of northeastern America, the Jesuit missionary Priest Louis Nicolas compiled an Algonquin grammarian, now held in the Oriental Manuscripts Department of the Bibliothéque Nationale de France in Paris. This book is divided into four parts: part one deals with verbs, conjugations and endings, part two focuses on rules of grammar, part three deals with tense sequencing, syntax, and the basic language as a whole, part four deals with adverbs, prepositions, conjunctions, and interjections. The authors of this work feel it necessary to state that this language is not "barbaric." On the contrary, it is one of the most beautiful and descriptive spoken languages, being very well thought out. Through this book of scholars, the Jesuits paint a picture of the importance of education and the deliverance of the spoken word, noting that those beautiful speakers, sweet talkers, direct the Indian council meetings.

The Moravians, in the name of the United Brethren movement, were also actively proselytizing amongst the natives of the new world. Reverend David Teisberger lived among these Indians and dramatically expanded the pool of linguistic knowledge. He conducted valuable studies of the "Mahikan", "Maqua", and "Delaware" dialects of the Algonquin and Iroquoian based languages. Of particular interest is a document found in the Moravian Church Archives in the Muswell Hill section of suburban London. In the last four pages of this document Teisberger charts about two hundred words in English and their corresponding Native American translations. These include translations for numbers, relations, feelings, body parts and many other useful words. Some made references to similarities between Native American words and their Hebrew counterparts. It was not uncommon to think of the Indians of North America as being the lost tribe of Israel. As a matter of fact, in 1834, Edwin James reasserts this theme as well as comparing and contrasting the Leni, Lenape, Mohegan, and Chippewa languages with those of other Native North Americans.

Today, many Native American tribes have active language arts programs for adults and children alike. Around council houses, greetings in native tongues are offered and conversations can be heard between native speakers. Indigenous languages have even made it into the national consciousness, inspiring commercially available computerized language programs produced by national vendors. Here on Martha's Vineyard, the local dialect of the Algonquin tongue is a proud cornerstone of the Wampanoag community and continues to generate interest amongst linguists, scholars, and Native Vineyarders alike.

The Six Sachemdoms of Martha's Vineyard

The term Sachem is a title of royalty given to a Native American leader of a group of individuals banded together. These groups can be bands, tribes, or nations with similarities in religion, language, customs, politics, and often geographical proximity. Protection, cooperation, and order are the main reasons for the formation of such living models. The people coming together consist of sanop (common folk), Elders, members of council, medicine and spiritual leaders, the Sachems, their spouses, and extended families. Each of these designated subsets of individuals have different places in the hierarchy. It should be noted that in other native clusters in New England and the eastern seaboard, the terms Sagamore, Sachemaker, Sackema, and Chief are used instead of, or in addition to Sachem. These Sachems and their people have region of operation and spheres of influence that are called a Sachemships. These unions are structured confederations which carry the personalities of their chief men or Sachems. Their powers, roles, and responsibilities vary from that of Demigod to ineffectual figurehead and can land anywhere in between. Factors that influence the control and reach of a Sachem over his people and the surrounding areas include: Number of warriors, skills as a planner and communicator, the relationship maintained with the council and the healer, seers, medicine men, and religious/spiritual leaders here called Powwows. Often these Sachemships are part of a Sachemdom which has a similar structure to a Sachemship on a grander scale.

On Martha's Vineyard one can see six distinct Sachemdoms. Some might argue that the Vineyard bands were subservient to other more powerful Sachems of the Wampanoag Nation and should be listed as Sachemships. However, considering the petty Sachems of areas like Sanchakantacket and Nobnocket, who were clearly under the influence of Towantaquit the Great Sachem of Nunepog/Nunpauk, we will call the larger Vineyard groupings Sachemdoms. Manuscripts of judicial records describe the powers of the Sachem. These powers incluce the following: The right to marry, judge, make agreements, and the right to sell and assign land. These records, in addition to deeds, make clear the blood preference to ascend to this position of upon the death of the Sachem. For the most part, the title is conferred upon the son of the deceased leader. However, Nataquanam (Woonataquannamow), also known as Elizabeth (Betty) Washaman, granddaughter of the aforementioned Towantaquit, was known as the Queen Sachem, and she actively participated in land sales to the settlers. More information about her is available in the database section of this volume under her number (103). As the Mayhews and company brought an end to much of the Native religion, Christianity and land issues brought an end to the political hierarchy of the Sachemdoms. In fact, "Sachem" was a common term used widely in seventeenth century documents, but rarely seen in similar papers after the 1730's.

Beginning from west to east, the first Sachemdom we find on the Island is that of Nohtoakset (Nohouassuet), which we will call Aquinnah/Gay Head. He came from off Island near the Massachusetts Bay and likely married a daughter of the Sachem at that time (circa 1600). Based on the marriage models observed while researching this book, he was probably born around 1575. He was likely the son of a Sachem, and had an older brother who was still alive when he moved down to Noepe, the Native name for the main body of Martha's Vineyard. Relatively little is known about Nohtoakset, but we do know that he had at least one daughter and three sons.

Mittark (probably Mitauk, database #102), who was not the oldest son of Nohtoakset, ascended to the position of Sachem by 1665, apparently in the absence of Ompohhunnut, his older brother. This Sachemship has varied greatly over time, but at the time of Mittark it included the land north and west of Menemsha Pond, the areas of Aquinnah, Kughtuhquichewutt, Nashaquitsa, northerly, westerly, and southerly, by the ocean and sound, and easterly as far as Wanemessit. However, It did not include Squibnocket. Mittark ruled over his people and these lands with his council until 1683 when, upon his death, his son Joseph took up the title. Joseph was removed because he sold land to the settlers against the decree of his father and the council. Next we see Osiah Mittark asserting his right to the Sachemship. He is rarely recorded in documents and likely died by 1705 when we see one Moses Will, petitioning Massachusetts as the rightful Sachem of Gay Head. As ministers became an integral part of Native life, the use of the term "Sachem" slowly diminished in public records. Today, the federally recognized Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head/Aquinnah has constructed their tribal headquarters on some of their original tribal land. They still confer the title of Sachem.

The Sachemdom of Wassulon was comprised of the southern portion of Nashawakemuck (modern-day Chilmark), Squibnocket, and Capoaquit, an island south of the Vineyard that is now known as No Mans Land. Wassulon was born approximately 1600. Wassulon conveyed land to Thomas Mayhew Junior in 1653 with Nittuane, perhaps a brother, uncle, nephew, or cousin. A confirmatory deed was executed and recorded in the New York land records in 1665. When he died, circa 1680, two sons of Wassulon ascended as equal Sachems according to Thomas Mayhew Senior, because Wassulon's debt to Mayhew was settled by both sons in equal shares. They are identified as Cascanabon, alias Phillip (#63) and Tackquabee, alias Johnson (#64). Apparently these two died at the same time, circa 1691. Tackquabee appears to have had no children and certainly no male heir but Cascanabon had a son called John Phillip, (#130) who asserted his right as Sachem and conveyed land from 1692-1710. Pomohannot (Pamehannit)(Pamchannit) (#135) appears to be a petty Sachem of the eastern most portion of this Sachemdom. He exercised his right to convey land prior to 1672. These deeds were witnessed by his famous religious son, Japheth. Hester Eanittus Wannit, also known as Hester China (#478), cousin of the aforementioned John and granddaughter of Pomohannot, is also seen claiming Sachem rights in this area from 1704-07. Other Sachems mentioned in southern Nashawakemuck include Eananawannit (#476) (father of the aforementioned Hester) and Penshomp (#479). In 1705 Sam Assewit asserts his claim as Sachem of Capoaquit but there are no records to confirm or deny the disposition of this claim.

Capoaquit is bound fully by water. Squibnocket is defined as a neck Southeast of Gay Head, north by the pond, east by Nashaquitsa and southerly by the ocean. The Nashawakemuck portion is westerly bound by Menemsha Pond, Nashaquitsa, easterly by the westerly limits of Quansoo as defined by the line from Kephigon to Koyphigan separating it from the Takemmeh Sachemdom of Maukutoukquet, southerly bounded by the ocean, and northerly by the middle line running from Waskosims to Menemsha dividing it from the Towtooe Sachemship.

The Towtooe Sachemship is bounded northerly by the sound, westerly by Menemsha Pond, southerly by the middle line ranging from Waskosims to Menemsha dividing it from the Wassulon section of Nashawakemuck and easterly by the line drawn from Kephigon to Koyphigon through the pond at Kephigon. Not much is known about the Sachem Towtooe except that he died circa 1663, leaving behind one son named John and three brothers. John Towtooe, (#239), calls himself a Sachem in a land conveyance in northern Nashawakemuck. He died circa 1723. Chipnock (#247) is referred to as a Sachem at the western end of the Sachemdom. Joseph Wesoquin (#168) was also mentioned as a

Takemmeh Sachemdom

Sachem in 1705, but again we see both the term and the political structure dwindle and die shortly thereafter.

By the time Mayhew arrived on the Vineyard, the Takemmeh (Takemmy) Sachemdom had two parts. The historical bounds of this Sachemdom were as follows; northerly by the sound, southerly by the ocean, westerly by the line from Kephigon to Koyphigon from water to water, and easterly by a line drawn from Tequanoman's Point at the southerly end and the black water of Wechpuhquahhassuh (Echpoohquasit) at the north. This boundary line divided the Sachemship of Maukutoukquet from that of Towantaquit. The largest section to the east was governed by Sachem Maukutoukquet (#659), while the smaller western portion bordering Nashawakemuck was overseen by Sachem Sossoannew (#1614). The Sossoannew section contained Quansoo, the area about Tiasquam River, Waaquesha, and eastern Kephigon. The areas can be further identified by using the map and map key herein. Two daughters of this Sachem married Wannamanhut (#419), who came from off island. Wannamanhut took over as Sachem upon Sossoannew's death circa 1664. Wannamanhut was instrumental in setting up Christiantown for the praying Indians of Takemmeh. He died about 1664 and a controversy broke out between John Amanhut (#428) and Nananit (#664), both sons of the deceased Sachem. Nananit, the older of the two, was very esteemed. In 1741, Nananit's apparent ascent is highlighted by his son Obediah being referred to as ruler of Christiantown.

Meanwhile, after the death of Maukutoukquet, the larger portion of Takemmeh was split into northern and southern sections. His two sons settled into their titles and began their dealings with their immigrant neighbors. The southern part was made up mostly of Scrubby Neck and the surrounding area. Their Sachem was Pasquanahomon, (#232), the oldest living son of Maukutoukquet. Pasquanahomon was born circa 1630 and died sometime after 1687. His son Samuel rose to the level of Sachem and conveyed several parcels of land before his death in 1721. Samuel had children who continued the practice of dealing with the whites religiously, judicially, and conveying them land, but they did not refer to themselves as Sachems.

The northern portion was ruled by Keteanumin, alias Josias (#42), younger brother of Pasquanahomon. Keteanumin had perhaps more dealings with the Mayhews than any other Sachem; the voluminous number of deeds certainly suggests this. At one point he was restricted from selling any more land to the settlers by Mayhew himself, who was formally the Governor, but was also referred to as the Sachem of Martha's Vineyard. Mayhew, Josias, and the aforementioned Wannamanhut, were responsible for allocating land in Christiantown, or as the Indians called it, Mannit Wattootan. A list of other native place names exists in appendix #10, located in the back of this volume. Circa 1700, Josias died and confusion seemed to follow as to who would be his successor. Alexander appeared to be his eldest son and executed a deed in 1701 as Sachem but in the same year, Zachriah Peeskin (Peuskenin) (#65) also appears as Sachem of record. It is possible that the Josias Sachemship was further divided but later documentation seems to suggest that Zachriah was endorsed by the Indian populous as their Sachem. Years later, we find Peeskin off island. The title and political structure of the band apparently departed with him. The stone walls of Christiantown still exist today as does the name. They stand as a tribute to Native Euro-American cooperation, Christianity, and the love Keteanumin had for his uncle Papamick, one of the first praying Indians.

Nunpauk (Nunepog) and the surrounding land was Towantaquit's Sachemdom. It is bounded by water northerly, southerly, and westerly, then easterly by that line drawn from the black water of Wechpuhquahhassuh (the northwesterly most part of Chikemmo) at the north to Tequanoman's Point at the southerly end. Tequanoman was the powerful and infamous Powwow referred to by Experience Mayhew in his published writing about the Indian converts on Martha's Vineyard. This was the largest Sachemdom of the six and was governed by the Sachem

Martha's Vineyard. Most of the genealogical history of the Island begins with Thomas Mayhew's accounts, but in the case of the eastern half of the Vineyard we find a strange and curious recording of sachems and rivers circa 1611. Found in the Egerton Manuscripts held at the British Library, we believe this unsigned, undated document to be the report of Captain Harlow. He was ordered to explore the islands about Cape Cod for Sir Ferdinando Gorges. Harlow is remembered in history as the Englishman who kidknapped Epanow from Capawick which we theorize is the northern portion of modern-day Chappaquiddick. This would explain his great specificity regarding Native Vineyard people, water ways and politics. Here we are given the name of one Tadosheme (#1620) as Sachem. He was probably the father of Towantaquit, but could have easily been his grandfather. Towantaquit had many political, commercial, and religious dealings with the newcomers. He was said to have been the first Sachem converted to Christianity.

When Towantaquit died circa 1670, he named his well loved friend Peter Mortall as his successor sachem. Not much is known about Peter but in the 1680's and 1690's, Towantaquit's granddaughter Nataquanam (#103) deeded out many parcels of land as Queen Sachem of Nunepaug. She appears to have been the daughter of Sakkagteanmou (Sacochanimo) (#904), son of Towantaquit, whose sphere of influence was laid out to him in 1644 in Native tongue. Curiously enough, this deed was recorded at Nantucket (Registry of Deeds Book 2 *f*45 verso/bottom). This bears noting because the Sachemdoms on the eastern end of Martha's Vineyard, prior to the influence of Mayhew, seem to have had a much closer relationship, both genealogically and commercially with the Native bands on Nantucket. This is evidenced in account books, ecclesiastical affairs and the marriage choice of the aforementioned Nataquanam who married Jacob Washaman of Nantucket. This theory takes on more definition in light of a British Library manuscript thought to be Harlow's report to Gorges. Harlow plainly states "who doth command thee west part I have forgotten but hee hath been enemye to ~ both ye other two, if I bee not mistaken." (British Library, Egerton Ms 2395 *f*413)

Sanchakantacket and Nobnocket are two large necks of land situated in the northeastern portion of Towantaquits' Sachemdom. At the time of the earliest land transfers from natives to immigrants, each of these areas had their own petty Sachems who were subordinate to Towantaquit. The earliest name we can affix on the Nobnocket Sachemship is that of one Cheeschumuck (#177). He is known in scholarly circles as the father of Cheeschumuck (#177). He is known in scholarly circles as the father of Caleb, the only Vineyard Native to graduate from The Harvard Indian College (1665). Cheeschumuck exercised his rights to sell land in the neighboring neck of Chickemmow, that being a one quarter interest. Ponit, son of Cheeschumuck assumed the reigns of Nobnocket, now called West Chop, about 1680 and actively deeded out land as Sachem.

To the east of Nobnocket and across Lagoon Pond lies the large neck of land call Sanchakantacket. Also a diminutive Sachemship under the dome of Towantaquit's influence, this segment of Martha's Vineyard was overseen by Autumsqueen (Autumsquin) (#34). He is rarely referred to but deeds from his son Wapamauk, more commonly known as Mr. Sam, clearly identify him as a Sachem. Autumsqueen signed a conveyance from his son demonstrating that Mr. Sam was acting as Sachem prior to the death of his father sometime after March of 1684. Take note that Banks inaccurately alters the flow of power to a fictitious Queen Sachem named Adomas. The mistake occurred by misreading Autumsqueen Sachem as Adomas Queen Sachem. Wapamauk continued to execute the position of Sachem of Sanchakantacket until about 1689. Putuspaquin was referred to as last sachem of Sanchekantacket. It's been postulated that he was a son of Mr. Sam but it seems more likely that he was Mr. Sam's younger brother. Mr. Sam's daughters sold land formerly belonging to their father, however they are not called Queen Sachems or Sachemesses.

The easternmost Sachemdom of Martha's Vineyard included Chappaquiddick, Capoag and Muskeget, a small island now part of Nantucket County. Chappaquiddick and Capoag represent the south and north sections of modern-day Chappaquiddick but were separated by an outlet at the upper third of Pocha Pond and an incomplete barrier beach to the south. In the earliest royal patents and grants of New England, as well as historical accounts, Martha's Vineyard was known as Capawick, undoubtedly because the ships of discovery and commerce approached the island from the northeast and thus first interacted with natives from Capoag (an obvious phonetic variation of Capawick).

These three islands were ruled by Pakepanessoo (Pakepanessit) (database #38), who was born circa 1595. The name of an earlier Sachem has been found in the body of the previously quoted British Library document, one Wavenot (#1619). The name Wavenot is remarkably similar to Wawenit, son of Nicanoosoo, Sachem at Wonnashquoom on the west end of Nantucket. Perhaps Wavenot was father to both Pakepanessoo and Nicanoosoo. There are no other facts to consider in this matter, yet it's more indicative of the relationship between the two sister islands. Pakepanessoo was referred to as the surly Sachem who ruled, married, judged, conveyed and administered political affairs until his death, circa 1681. He was succeeded by his son Seiknout (Sokinneouut) (#463). Peescosh was the oldest living son of Pakepanessoo but Seiknout was hand-picked to be Sachem because he was wholly of Royal blood (his mother was the daughter of a Nantucket Sachem) and by all accounts more popular. By 1692 Joshua Seiknout assumed and faithfully executed the role of Sachem until his death in 1716. Jacob Seiknout (#119) succeeded his father. Seiknout was born circa 1693 and was twenty-two years old at the time of his father's death. He had many land dealings and court battles with the English Proprietors of Chappaquiddick. He died by 1735. Afterward, The Seiknout dynasty daughtered out, but by this point the English had so significantly encroached upon the natives of Chappaquiddick that the political necessity for a Sachem was all but gone.

Some Sachem names have lived on as road and place names but now they all can be presented in proper historical and genealogical perspective. The following section consists of three generation descendancy charts of Sachems mentioned above. The Sachemdom and Sachemship boundary information was derived from the integration of facts found in primary sources, mainly in the Dukes County Registry of Deeds (DCRD), The Martha's Vineyard Museum formerly the Dukes County Historical Society (DCHS), and the records of the Supreme Judicial Court (SJC). Some specific references to the information expressed in this section are as follows (presented in repository, book/page format); DCRD 1/33, 93--4/268--5/246-8, 384, 423-4, 451--6/160, 190, 192, 201, 246, 283, 344, 366--7/232, 277,--8/142, 218, 291, 293, 296--9/558>>>DCHS Box 10 S envelop 19>>>SJC #25790.

The Native population has always been of importance to European immigrants to Martha's Vineyard. The aforementioned Mayhew family paid close attention to the numbers of native Vineyarders for several reasons. Ecclesiastically, Mayhew was interested in reporting to his fellow missionaries his success in bringing The Gospel to the Vineyard Indians. He monitored the number of converts and compared it to the whole population as if he were keeping score. Of course his ultimate goal was to convert the entire Native population to Christianity. As Lords of the Manor, the Mayhews watched the Native count for security and as a father figure, making sure all his vassals had shelter and clothes. Other scholars, educators, and power brokers also studied Vineyard population figures for religious, scientific, linguistic, and security purposes. Some indication of the Vineyard's Native American population over three centuries (1600's-1800's) can be ascertained from the sources below.

In 1807 a narrative probably written by Dr. James Freeman (Massachusetts Historical Society Collections) discussed the Vineyard's Indian population in the past:

> ...Not less than three thousand Indians, it has been generally estimated, were on the island when it was entered by Mayhew...that Martha's Vineyard then was capable of sustaining a multitude of inhabitants, is evident; and that this was the fact may with some degree of probability be inferred from the great number of proper names in common use. There was not a hill, a cove, a point of land, or a pond, however small, which had not its own appellation...words follow the steps of men; and where a country by distinct names is subdivided into many minute parts, there is always reason to suppose that it has a numerous population. In 1643, and at several other times they were visited by a general disease. This was probably the yellow fever, which was, with the consumption, the disorder of which they commonly died. In 1674, they were reduced to three hundred families, or about fifteen hundred souls.

In 1674, Daniel Gookin of Cambridge received a letter from Thomas Mayhew of the Vineyard, which is reprinted in Gookin's Historical Collections (1677, reprinted by Massachusetts Historical Society, 1792):

Collections (1677, reprinted by Massachusetts Historical Society, 1792):

> ...the first church was gathered here just fifteen years since...which church is now become three churches...two upon the Vineyard. There are nearly fifty in full, and suppose rightly in communion...The families here are three hundred at least; upon the isle Chappaquidgick, sixty families; but one of them that prays not to God. The other, two hundred and forty families are generally praying.

In 1675, the Executive Council of New York (Minutes) gave the Indian population of Nantucket as "500 to 600 men...with less on the Vineyard."

In 1692, Matthew Mayhew's "Brief Narrative..." stated that, though the number of Indians on Martha's Vineyard had been "much lessened" by a recent epidemic, the church consisted of more than a hundred people.

Cadillac's "Memoire", 1692 says of "Martinvigners" that "there are several settlements and many Indians. There are eight hundred now there

In 1694, Mayhew's Triumphs and Conquests of Grace notes:

> ...in the year 1690, of the Indians of Martha's Vineyard...of the ...more than 100 adult people that died, not less than three fourths were of the sober religious professors...notwithstanding in the year 1692, of the...church, were remaining more than 100...their children are generally taught to read, & many to write. In one of their towns, the last winter, viz.1693, thirty children were at school, twenty more of the same place, at the same time, accidentally, being not supplied with books, could not attend it. Such who are too far distant from any school, are often taught by some of their neighbours; in divers places are lesser schools.

*Account of an Indian Visitation, A.D.1698. Copied for Dr. Stiles, by Rev. Mr. Halwey, Missionary at Marshpee, from the Printed Account Published in 169*8. Massachusetts Historical Society Collections:

> ..."The Rev.Mr.Grindal Rawson, pastor of the church in Mendon, and the Rev.Mr. Sam-uel Danforth, pastor of the church in Taunton, spent from May 30th, to June 24, 1698, in visiting the several plantations of Indians within this province" of Massachusetts, of which they gave the following account.

At Major Winthrop's Island...are about nine families, most of which can read well, are diligent in their callings and generally belong to the church whereof Japhet is pastor, at Martha's Vineyard. Men, women and children, are thirty people in all. Half the Indian inhabitants of this island have died in a few years past. Three families living at Saconeset point do attend to the meeting at Mr.Winthrop's island. At...Slocum's island, we hear of seven families, most of which can read, being lately moved thither from the Vineyard and other places.

At Martha's Vineyard, viz. at Chilimark alia Nashauekammuck...we find two hundred and thirty one people; three score and four in full communion (with Rev. Japhet Hannit's church.)

At Ohkonkemme, within the bounds of Tisbury, are three score and twelve people... At Seconchqut in aforesaid Chilmark also...are thirty five people...At Gayhead, Abel and Elisha are preachers, to at least two hundred and sixty souls; who have here at their charge a meeting house already framed. We find that the Indians here, as also may be affirmed of most of the Indians belonging to Martha's Vineyard (Chaubaqueduck excepted) are well instructed in reading, well clothed, and mostly in decent English apparel.

At Edgar town, viz. at Sahnchecontuckquet, are twenty five families amounting to one hundred and thirty six person...

At Nunnepoag about eighty four people...At Chaubaqueduck about one hundred and thirty eight people...

In 1702, The Diary of Samuel Sewall noted that "Abel (Hosuit) says there are Fifty-Eight houses in the Gay-head Neck."

In 1709 (NE Co.Recs, GL, Ms.7955) Samuel Sewall stated there were "above fifty familys on Gayhead."

At a church service at Gay Head in 1714 (Ibid), Sewall observed that "About one Hundred Men and Women were gathered together besides Children."

In 1720, Experience Mayhew's Brief Narrative observed:

> ...The Number of Indians on these Islands is very much diminished, since the English first settled on Marth's-Vineyard, which was in the Year 1642 there being then as was supposed on that Island about 1500 Souls. At present there are in the Vineyard six small Villages, containing in all of them, about 155 Families, and the Number of Souls may be about eight hundred...Besides the Indians on the Vineyard, there is a small assembly on Winthrop's Island, the Eastermost of Elsabeth's Islands...
> At Tucker's-Island, & at Nashaun or Slocum's Island, which lie near together, Westward of Winthrop's Island, are about 12 or 14 Families, and these, tho' their Number be Small, are provided with an Indian Preacher. At...No-mans-land, there are now so few Indians left, that they have none to preach constantly to them...
> Besides the Indian Assemblies already mentioned, there is one Assembly of Anabaptist at the Gayhead; but the number of People belonging unto this, is very inconsiderable...There are yet but few Indians on Martha's-Vineyard that have Houses of the English fashion, tho' the number of these is of late increased;...

Cotton Mather's India Christiana (pg. 37) noted in 1721, "The last account which we took not long ago, informed us that at Martha's Vineyard, and the little Adjacent Island, there were Ten little Congregations,...which have...Ten Indians, that in their own language do Preach unto them. At Nantucket, there were three Congregations, and as many Preachers.

In 1747 (MA Arc. 31/550-52), the Gay Head guardians stated that they were "in number about one hundred & twelve, men women and children" This may be under-estimated by at least one hundred. The report states: "the number of houses at Gayhead is 28; we compute four people to a house which is 112, and of these about 19 Labouring men." Theophilus

Mayhew stated that he viewed the land which was allowed to ye Indians for their own improvement and according to his best (estimate) there is upwards of one hundred acers of it...& also...he endeavoured to find out ye number of howses there which by ye best information he could git was about twenty six. Solomon Hoswit...saith that there was sixteen or seventeen howeses upon that part of ye neck which is leased out.

A 1749 petition by the Gay Head proprietors (MA Arc. 31/643) noted "the number of all the souls are about 165."

A 1762 report on Christiantown to the Massachusetts General Court noted "the Indians (there)are 54 in number"

In 1765, a statewide census of Massachusetts (Benton, Early Census Making in Massachusetts) stated that Edgartown contained 37 male and 49 female Indians, and 12 male and 8 female "Negroes"; Chilmark (doubtless including Gay Head) contained 72 male and 116 female Indians, and 9 male and 8 female "Negroes"; Tisbury contained 15 male and 24 female Indians, and 4 male and 5 female "Negroes." Nantucket contained 83 male and 66 female Indians, and 24 male and 20 female "Negroes." The whole number of Indians in Edgartown was 86; in Chilmark, 188; and in Tisbury, 39. The total number of Indians on the Vineyard was 313, and at Nantucket, 93.

A 1764/65 "Census of Negroes in Massachusetts" (MA Arc.) shows 20 in Edgartown, 17 in Chilmark & 9 in Tisbury, for a total of 46. A 1776 "Census of Blacks" in Massachusetts (Ibid) shows 59 in Dukes County.

The 1781 Des Barres map of the Vineyard shows "23 English & Indian houses" at Chappaquiddick and 15 houses at Gayhead

In 1786, William Baylies "A Description of Gay Head" in Memoirs of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, Vol. II, Part 1, pp. 150-155 (Boston, 1793) states: "The Indians inhabiting this part, when lately numbered, amounted to two hundred and three (203)." As to religion, they were divided between the Congregational and Baptist persuasion. Baylies had been invited by the Rev. Mr. West, who may have conducted the enumeration.

In 1790, the Federal census listed 39 "nonwhite free people" in Dukes County, obviously African-Americans, some of whom may have been married to Indians. Information furnished to the Massachusetts Historical Society in 1792 (MHS Colls, 1st series, Vol.1, p.206) reported there were 276 Indians at Gay Head in 1790.

In 1792/93 the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel took a census of all Indian communities in Massachusetts. Only the totals survive, and are published in Felt's Collections of the American Statistical Association (Vol.I, Part II, 1845). Benjamin Bassett cites these totals in 1792 (Collections of the Massachusetts Historical Society). There were 75 people at Chappaquiddick, "one third unmixed"; 25 at Sanchecantaket, "one fifth unmixed"; 40 at Christiantown, "one half unmixed"; 25 at Nashouohkamuck (Chilmark), "three fourths unmixed"; and 276 at Gay Head, "one fourth unmixed." The total Indian population of the Vineyard was 441.

A copy of the 1792 census for Gay Head was found among the papers of B. Bassett of Cincinatti, Ohio and sent to Zacheus Howwoswee, where it was copied for the Massachusetts Historical Society in 1852. It gives heads of households and number in each family and shows the total population of Gay Head as 251 (26 less than the other total).

In 1801 (SPG, PEM), missionary Zachariah Mayhew reported that there were 320 Indians at Martha's Vineyard, in 4 villages. Also in 1801, Gideon Hawley noted that the New England Palladium mentioned the number of Indians at Martha's Vineyard "taken lately by order of the general government" was "194 in the several towns on the island." This paper (also called the Massachusetts Mercury) notes that the census of Dukes County showed 34 Indians in Edgartown, 146 in Chilmark, 10 in Tisbury.

In 1807, Dr. James Freeman's narrative, based on information from Joseph Thaxter, a local authority, treats the Vineyard's Indian population (MHS Collections, corroborated by Kendall's "Travels"):

> ...At Chappaquiddick...on this island they have a tract of land reserved to them, containing about eight hundred acres. They are much intermixed with white and negro blood, very few of them being pure Indians...several of them live in framed houses, are good farmers, and are tolerably neat in their people and habitations. The old men only are farmers, and are assisted by the women, who sow and hoe the corn; the young men are seamen. Their lands are not enclosed; but their cattle are kept with a tedder. Their numbers which are probably increasing, are sixty-five, of whom nine are strangers, intermarried with them. The framed houses are ten; the wigwams two.

Near Sangekantacket, adjoining the Lagune, at a place called Farm Neck, there was formerly a large town of Indians; and twenty persons of a mixed race still remain, who live in six houses, are divided into six families, and retain near two hundred acres of land.

At West Chop in Tisbury, there is one Indian family, consisting of five people.

In the north-west part of Tisbury there is a tract of land, called Christiantown, assigned to the Indians, who are placed under guardians. They consist of nine families and thirty-two souls, of whom one male and six females are pure; the rest are mixed, chiefly with whites.

The great body of the Indians is at Gayhead. They have here a tract of excellent land, containing three thousand acres, reserved to them...The Indians have twenty-six framed houses and seven wigwams...the number of families is thirty four; and of souls one hundred and forty two; beside whom about a hundred Indians are absent from Gayhead; some of whom are children put out to service in English families; and others whale-men; making the whole number of proprietors, about two hundred and forty.

Beside the houses at Gayhead, there is one Indian house and three wigwams at Chilmark; all the inhabitants of which, except a woman living in one of the wigwams, have rights at Gayhead, and are included in their number.

In 1808, Elisha Clapp of Sandwich wrote to Rev. Jedidah Morse (MHS Misc. Bound) that the Indians at Christian Town numbered "about 30."

In 1809 (Pusey Library, Harvard, "Grants for Work Among the Indians 1720-1810", Folder 32) a letter to the Society for Propagating the Gospel from a committee appointed by the Indians at Chappaquiddick stated that there were "82 people, 39 of whom are under the age of twenty years, and are fast increasing in number."

In 1816, Ebenezer Skiff, the Gay Head lighthouse keeper and an advocate for the tribe's interests, wrote to Captain Paul Cuffe (Cuffe Papers, NBFPL) that in May 1811 the Gay Head proprietors, according to a list taken in that year, were 133 of full age and 137 "infants."

In 1821, a list made by Frederick Baylies (Recs. of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Indians, Peabody Essex Museum, Salem MA; Box 8) stated that Deep Bottom had 10 inhabitants; Farm Neck, 16; Chabaquiddick, 91; Christiantown, 44; and Gayhead, 244. In 1819 (Ibid), Baylies stated that there were "30 Scholars 5 to 16 years of age at the Gayhead school."

In 1823, Frederick Baylies' census of the Martha's Vineyard Indians (Sewall-Shattuck Papers, NEHGS) listed 250 at Gay Head, 51 at Christiantown, 13 at Deep Bottom, 12 at Farm Neck, and 100 at Chappaquiddick, for a total of 426.

The (New Bedford) Old Colony Journal reported on November 1, 1823: "The number of Indians on Martha's Vineyard, according to a recent report of Mr.Baylies, the resident treacher there, is about 400 of which 244 are at Gay Head."

On March 1, 1827, a "Report on the Condition of the native Indians...in this Commonwealth" (MA House of Reps. Report No. 68, submitted by D.L. Child, H. Stebbins & Daniel Fellows Jr.) stated that there were 250 people at Gay Head, 101 at Chappaquiddick, 45 at Christiantown, and 24 at Farm Neck & Deep Bottom (combined), at the last places noting "one only of whom is pure Indian."

In 1828 (DCRD) the Chappaquiddick land division recorded 110 people; the Christiantown division recorded 48 people.

Indian Guardianship Papers (DCRP I/1157 A-D) relating the accounts of the Native population of Chappaquiddick and other Indian owned areas on Martha's Vineyard from 1828-64

Barber's "Historical Collections" states there were 235 people at Gay Head in 1838.

In 1848, the "Report of the Commissioners Relative to the Condition of the Indians in Massachusetts" (House Report No. 46) showed 85 people at Chappaquiddick (12 families, 43 males, 42 females; 75 natives, 10 "foreigners"); 49 people at Christiantown (11 families, 26 males, 23 females, 45 natives, 10 "foreigners"); and 174 people at Gay Head (38 families, 81 males, 90 females, 102 natives, 12 "foreigners").

In 1861, Earle's "Report of Indian Commission to Governor and Council, 1861 (Senate Document, No. 96, pp. 30-31) stated that there were 46 families actually resident in Gay Head; 204 people, 106 males, 98 females, and 49 people living elsewhere, but claim-ing tribal rights, making a total of 253 belonging to the town by birth or residence. At Chappequiddick there were 74 people: 17 families, 36 men, 38 women, 7 "foreigners." At Christiantown there were 53 people: 14 families, 23 men, 30 women. At Deep Bottom there were 13 people: 4 families, 7 men, 6 women.

From 1869-70, papers re: Indian Lands (DCRP D1/235) track the Native populations at Chappaquiddick, Gay Head, and Christiantown with respect to land portions and allocations

The 1871 Report of the Commissioner Appointed to Complete the Examination and Determination of All Questions of Title to Land and of all Boundary Lines Between the Individual Owners at Gay Head counted 227 people, some of whom were absent.

Banks' History of Martha's Vineyard notes the following in a section on Gay Head: In 1870, Federal census showed 160 people at Gay Head.
In 1880, Federal census showed 161 people at Gay Head.
In 1890, Federal census showed 139 people at Gay Head.
In 1900, Federal census showed 173 people at Gay Head and 7 people at Chappaquiddick

Preview of Volume Two:

Family Genealogical History Sample:

Able/Wowompaquin

Where volume one is dedicated to Indian individuals, volumes two and three consist of comprehensive genealogical histories. Little is known about some of these individuals but many of those Native Vineyarders found in the database are part of a tall and broad family tree. These next volumes are meant to present the "better-documented" native peoples into a family based record begining with the first known male of that name in the line. The number following the title name is that first individual's database reference. The following is an example.

Abel/Wowompaquin Database #104

Nohtooksaet[1], born say 1590, was "a sachim that came from the Massachusetts Bay(to Gayhead)many years since"(Indian Converts). He appears in no contemporary documents and probably died by the 1650s; the only source for his name and his family is Mayhew's interviews with Gay Headers many years later. Nohtooksaet may have been a survivor of the plague which decimated the Massachusett tribe about 1616; he probably married a woman of Gay Head sachem lineage.

Children of Nohtooksaet[1] & wife or wives, born Gay Head:

?i ?Omppohhunnit[2], born say 1618, see Amos.

ii Mittark/Mattack[2], born say 1620, see Mittark writeup.

iii Abel[2] Wowompaquin, born say 1622, see below.

iv A daughter[2], the mother of Annampanu (see Panue).

Abel[2] Wauwompaquin(Nohtooksaet[1]) born at Gay Head say 1622, was a "Good Man" (Mayhew's Indian Converts, pp.98-99); he was > a son of Nohtooksaet, a Sachim that came from the Massachusetts Bay many years since...and a younger brother to Mittark, the Sachem at Gay Head... he was one amongst the first that embraced Christianity in the place where he lived...(and was) joined to that Society soon after it was gathered, in the year 1670...He was sometimes called to the Office of a Magistrate among the Peoples of his own Nation.

Abel probably took his Christian name upon his conversion. "Wahwampaquin" questioned John Cotton at a Nashuakemmuck sermon in 1667 (Journal, MHS). He is listed as a witness to an agreement between his brothers Mittark and Ompohhunnut in 1675 (DCRD 6/369), though that document's authenticity is in question. Mayhew continues:

> After (Abel) was blind with Age, and lived among his Children in their Houses, he continued to preach the Name of God...tho he lived to so great an Age, that his Reason and Memory did at last in some measure fail him, yet his piety and Charity did even then very much appear in his Discourses...(he) died at Nashowohkamuk in the Year 1713.

Samuel Sewall's Diary notes a visit to "Abel's Widow" in 1714, after which Sewall went "to the top of Prospect Hill."

> Children of Abel[2] Wauwompaquin & wife, born Chilmark or Gayhead:

i Abel[3] Wauwompaquin Jr., born say 1650, had children.

ii Others, who lived to adulthood; Indian Converts says that in old age, the elder Abel "lived among his Children in their houses." Since the surnames Abel & Wowompaquin were carried on by only one son, the others were probably daughters.

Abel[3] Wauwompaquin Jr.(Abel[2], Nohtooksaet[1]), born say 1650, was "Deacon of the Indian Church on the West End of Martha's Vineyard, and a Preacher of the Word of God at Nashuoohkamuk...after (he)was married, and had some children, he...joined as Member...to the church whereof John Tackanash was pastor"(Indian Converts; pp.67-71); that church was formed in 1670, and Tackanash died in 1684.

Abel witnessed the sachem Penshomp's deed to Nicanoosoo in August 1690 (Native Writings 1/123), the same year in which, according to Mayhew, Abel suffered the loss of his hearing from the "fever" among the Vineyard Indians. Despite this handicap he continued to preach diligently. In 1698, Rawson & Danforth noted:

> at Chilmark alias Nashawekammuck... Japhet is pastor...Unto whom is adjoined Abel, a ruling elder, who likewise preaches to a part of the church, living at too great a distance ordinarily to attend Japhet's ministry; although they come together to attend church administrations.

Abell Wawompaquin sued Phillip Nicanoose in 1703 (DCCR); in 1704 he and his son Caleb witnessed Sarah Penshomp's deed to Matthew Mayhew (DCRD 9/400). On 28 May 1704 (Native Writings 1/139, witnessed by Stephen Commasnim & Benjamin Skiffe) Sarah Penshomp confirmed to Abell Wawompaquen, land which he already occupied, at "Mossumuh," lying NW from Sekompaquahit (Squibnocket) Pond, bounded by a swamp & "Abel's fence" and by the fresh meadow at the end of the pond.

Indian Converts says that Abel became Deacon of his church after the death of the previous Deacon, Jonathan Amos, in 1706:

> ...some of his children were persons of no good character...(his prayer succeeded in)raising a grandchild of his from the very mouth of the grave, and restoring it to health, tho it had sometimes seemed to be quite dead...There were three of his sons who came to untimely ends...Caleb and E(l)ias...and one called Cornelius, who was drowned not long since...

Abel Wowompaque(e)n/Wauwompuque was paid for preaching from 1703 to 1718(NE Co.Recs, GL, & Sewall's "Ledger", MHS). In 1711, Rhodolphus Thacher deeded land in Chilmark to his son Rhodolphus Thacher Jr. "near the English built house of Abell" (DCCR, Athearn Mss). In a division of the common land in Chilmark in 1713 (SJC # 144232, Tilton vs Hillman), Abel Wowompaquen drew the 22nd lot. On 13 November 1717(DCRD 3/300) Abel Wowompaquen of Chilmark, planter, exchanged with Ebenezer Allen of Chilmark, the 25th lot in Chilmark for 15 acres of land.

Abel Wowompaquin was a debtor to Robert Cathcart's estate in 1720(DCRP 1/107). On 11 February 1721 (DCRD 3/451) Jonathan Chin gave for "divers good and weighty causes" to Abill Wowompaquen, all his right in the lands & meadow of a tract "neare ye stone wall pond in...Chilmark...ye bounds...to extend as sett forth in a certain deed...of Sarah Peanshomp to ye sd Abell."

Abel died 1 October 1722 (Indian Converts), having "foretold that his Death was approaching...about a Year or two before he dy'd, when he seemed to others, likely to live many Years longer," and was survived by his wife and some children who he spoke to on his deathbed. In 1724(DCRD 4/27)Bethiah Philip sold to Abel Hosuit, all her right in land at Menemsha, bounded S by Abel Hosuit, W by land of Abel Wowompaquin deceased, N by Ephraim Nicodemus and Philip Nickanaso deceased, and E by William Clark. In 1731 (DCRD 6/361) Paul Able alias John sold to Hannah Skiffe, a tract bounded W "by the Lands formerly belonging to Able Wowampaquin."

Children of Abel[3] Wauwompaquin & wife, born Chilmark:

i Elias[4] Abel, born say 1675, married Hannah Hannit.

ii Caleb[4] Abel, born say 1680, witnessed Penshomp's deed to Matthew Mayhew in 1704; was sued as a debtor by Robert Cathcart in 1707 (DCCR) and was charged by John Norton with stealing a saddle in 1708(DCCR). He predeceased his father; his "confessions are set down in Chapter third" (of Indian Converts) according to Mayhew, but they are not found there and were evidently not inserted.

iii Martha[4] Abel, married ——- Amos, who died by 7 March 1723 (DCRD 5/285) when Martha Amos, a "weadow" of Chilmark, sold to Pain Mayhew, "one sixth part of (40) acers of land and ye Like Part in two Lotts of Land Laitely Laid out in the Common...(all sd Lands Belonging To ye Estate of my Deceased father Abel Wowompaquin...which he...held by Deed of Gift from Matthew Mayhew...ye (40) acers being ye Lands on Which ye Sd Abel Last Dwelt and ye other Lott Laid out of the Common as Above Sd one being ye Twenty Second Lott in ye first Division...Togather With a Sixth part of a Shear in Comon in Sd Town of Chilmark."

iv Cornelius[4] Abel, born say 1690-95, was a debtor to Robert Cathcart's estate in 1720 (DCRP 1/107). William Homes' Diary notes on '7ber 24" 1721, "I had an account yesterday that Cornelius Abel coming from Rod(Rhode)Island by water was drowned last week." On "8ber 1," 1721, Homes wrote: "On Friday was severe night Cornelius Abel together with some other indians coming from Rhud Island he was drowned." Mayhew affirmed (writing in 1724) that Cornelius Abel was "drowned not long since."

v Abel[4] Abel, born say 1695, married Mehitable Tohqunit.

vi Noah[4] Abel, born say 1690-95, husbandman of Chilmark and represented by Silvanus Bourne when he was sued by Thomas Turner of Rochester, shipwright, for a debt of L29 in September 1722 (Plymouth Co.Ct CP). The action was barred, "that in the Law was not attended in Approbating said bond." Noah was sued for debt by John Cunningham in 1729 and by Catherine Cunningham in 1734(DCCR, Athearn Mss). He was Deacon of the Nashuohkamuk church from at least 1729, to 1752(NE Co.Recs, NEHGS). In 1733 (DCRD 6/185) Hannah Skiffe sold to Benjamin Skiffe, a tract

"at a place called ye Stone Wall, being part of ye lands formerly granted to Col.Thomas Dongan... beginning at NW corner of Mrs. Hanah Mayhews inclosure which is the E line of granted lands, N by William Hunt & Hanah Mayhew till the Middle Line, W by the Middle Line till the E line of Noah Abel where ye sd line crosseth ye Middle Line, thence... SE...to a heap of stones & an old seller that was the NW corner of lands formerly improved by Isaac Ommo, thence...NE to the corner of Hanah Mayhew's inclosure."

On 17 December 1737 (DCRD 6/252) Noah Abel sold for L18 to Thomas Hambleton, 5 1/2 acres in Chillmark, being "one Sixth parte of ye 22nd and 23rd Lotts of ye Comon Land Layd out in ye first Division" bounded W by William Tilton, N by Beriah Tilton, E by Elijah Mayhew deceased, & S by a highway; "the Remaining Parte of ye Lotts... belonging Unto Aron Garshom, Abel Abel and the heirs of Ebnr Allen Esqr Decsd."

In 1743 the town of Chilmark voted "the school house be removed and set near the tan fats(sic) by the house of Noah Abel"(Banks, "Annals of Chilmark", p.62). On 25 May 1747 (DCRD 7/381) Pain Mayhew sold to John

Norton, 40 acres in Chilmark, bounded "E by ye highway that leadeth into the woods, NW by the Land now in ye Improvement of Noah Abel...SE by lands lately belonging unto ye Late Rev.Mr.William Homes."

Noah Abel died in the Spring of 1752 (NE Co.Recs,NEHGS); it is not known whether he was married. Elizabeth/Betty Abel was sued for debt by John Mills of Chilmark in 1725 and by Samuel Bassett of same in 1732 for "sundry clothing sold & delivered to her & money paid other persons on her behalf"(DCCR, NEHGS). Elizabeth Able was a witness at Jonathan Gershom's murder trial in 1760 (see). She may have been Noah's wife, sister, sister-in-law or niece.

Elias[4] Abel (Abel[3] Abel[2] Nohtooksaet[1]), born at Chilmark say 1675, married Hannah, daughter of the Rev. Japhet Hannit and his wife Sarah. According to Abel Wauwompaquin's sketch in Indian Converts, his son Elias predeceased him, and "his (Elias')confessions are set down in Chapter third," but the latter were apparently not inserted as they are not found anywhere in the text.

Elias was probably dead by 13 April 1720 (DCRD 5/30) when Hanah, daughter of Japhet Hannit (her surname is not given), and her two (widowed) sisters sold to Joseph Potumpon, land at Sanchekantacket which they had inherited from their father. In 1721(DCRD 5/274) Joseph Wesohquin sold to Experience Mayhew, his right in a tract at Roaring Brook, part of the bounds being where the brook "parts into two branches a little westward of the Indian house where Hannah Abel now Dweleth." She probably died by 1728 when her daughters sold rights in her father Japhet Hannit's land.

Children of Elias[4] and Hannah(Hannit)Abel, born Chilmark:

i Sarah[5] Abel, born say 1700, married (1)Alexander Akoochik. In 1723 (DCRD 5/286) Allexander Accouchue of Chilmark and Sarah his wife and Bettee Abel of same, "being Dafters to Elias Able...Deceased," sold for L9 10s to Pain Mayhew, all their right in the 40 acres, and 1 share of common, given to their grandfather Abele Wowompaquin by Matthew Mayhew. Sarah married (2)Aron Gershom, with whom she sold rights in Japhet Hannit's land in 1728.

ii Bethiah[5] Abel, born say 1702, sold rights in her grandfather Abel's land in 1723 (see above), and was the schoolteacher at Nashowohkamuk, 1732 to 1734 (NE Co.Recs, NEHGS). From 1733 on she was called Bethiah Zekil, so had married (1)(Gershom?)Ezekiel. In 1733 (DCRD 5/376), Bethiah Abel alias Esockol, signing as Zekel, sold rights to land of her other grandfather Japhet Hannit. She married (2)Solomon Ned/Chamuck of Christiantown(see).

iii ?Jedidah[5] Abel, born say 1704, married by 5 September 1731 (DCRD 5/287) Benjamin Whitten of Tisbury, with whom she sold to Pain Mayhew, all her right in 40 acres and 1 share of common in Chilmark, "being part...of ye Estate of our Grandfather Abel Wompaquin... Which he...held by Deed from Matthew Mayhew."

In 1733 (DCRD 6/376) Benjamin Whiton(without Jedidah) sold rights in Japhet Hannit's land; in 1752, his probable daughters sold rights inherited from Japhet's wife Sarah.
See Whitten alias Tobey.

Abel[4] Abel(Abel[3] Abel[2] Nohtooksaet[1]), born at Chilmark say 1695, married Mehitable Tohqunit, daughter of Thomas Tohqunit of Roaring Brook. "Abel Wauwompaquit Junior" was a debtor to Robert Cathcart's estate in 1720 (DCRP 1/107) and was sued by Samuel Athearn in 1722 (DCCR). He was probably the son of whom his father "entertained some Hopes that he would serve the Lord in the Work of the Ministry" (Indian Converts), since he was a minister at Nashowohkamuk from 1724 to 1750 (NE Co.Recs, NEHGS). In 1734 he was "assistant to the pastor." On 14 October 1725 (DCRD 5/288, recorded 31 October 1731)"Abel Abel Alis...Wowompaquin" of Chilmark sold for L4 15s to Pain Mayhew of same,

> ...one Tenth Part of fourty Acers...and Two Lotts of Land Thereunto Belonging and one Share in Comon ye Abovesd Lotts being Laitely Laid out in sd Town...With all ye Wood and Underwood thereon...ye Land Above Granted is Part of Certain Lands and Common Which Abil Wowompaquin father to ye grantor held by Grant from Matthew Mayhew Esqr father to ye grantee...

On 21 February 1729(DCRD 4/346)Able Able of Chilmark and Mehitable his wife sold for L3 to Jonathan Hillman, all their right to "certain lands...(west of)ye Roaring brook...yt lately belonged unto Thomas Taquenut...with ye...underwood thereon standing." William Clark sued Abel Able in 1730 (DCCR, case appealed). Abel Abel was an abuttor to his brother Noah Abel in 1737 (see above).

On 13 February 1741 (DCRD 6/489) Abel & Mehitable Abel, and Caleb & Barsheba Elisha, quitclaimed to Jonas Hosewit, their right to 15 acres at Roaring Brook in Chilmark, which had belonged to Thomas Taquenut(see). Abel Abel "preached 4 months at Nashowohkamuk" in 1749 and died in 1750(NE Co.Recs, NEHGS). Hitty Abel was on a list of disbursements to the Vineyard's Indian poor in 1755(MHS); no further record.

Probable children of Abel[4] & Mehitable (Tohqunit) Abel, born Chilmark:

i Abel[5] Abel, born say 1725-30, had children.

ii Abigail[5] Abel, born say 1735, married in 1757, Israel Amos;
her daughters inherited their uncle's land at Abel's Neck.

Abel[5] Abel(Abel[4], Abel[3], Abel[2], Nohtooksaet[1]), was born say 1725-30 at Chilmark. John Newman's account book shows that John Allen Jr. was charged for one scythe delivered to Abel Able at Chilmark in 1751. In March, 1752, a presentment against Abel Wawompaquin of Chilmark was continued until the next term; in 1757, Matthew Mayhew sued him for trespass(DCCR). His wife was perhaps the Elizabeth Able who was a witness at Jonathan Gershom's murder trial in 1760 (Ibid), and/or the Elizabeth Abel who was on the 1792 Gay Head census with seven persons.

In 1785, the town of Chilmark voted to build a new meeting-house "on Abels hill near Abel Abels house where the commity her to fore Pointed out as the most convenient spot"

(Town Recs 1/205). In 1786(Ibid), the town voted "to remove the old meeting house to the hill near Abels heretofore chosen and Rebuild the same" and to buy a half acre of William Stewart "about (12) Rods North from the Gate near Abel Abels."

On 12 December 1788 (Massachusetts Resolves, 1790, Chapter 26) Abel Abel(signing his own name) petitioned the General Court to sell a tract of land, having "some years ago by misfortune became indebted unto Moses Lumbert...in a very considerable sum amounting to 28 pounds and whereas I am now advanced in years and not able to make payment...unless I can sell some part of my Land." James Athearn and Zachariah Howwoswe approved the petition on 11 March 1789:

> We (being) Guardians to the Gayhead Indians (are) aquainted with (Abel Abel)...he has no Chilldren and (is)of an advanced age and as he has a good house att his other Lands where he occupies as much as he by his Industry gits a comfortable support and the situation of the Lands petitioned for the sale of cannot be Profitable to him being at a Distance from him and much Exposed by Drift, & Traviling of the Gayhead Indians who are not carefull to keep up the bars and other fences.

On 25 January 1790, Matthew Mayhew Esqr. was authorized to sell land for Abel. On 25 May 1791 (Mass. Resolves, Chapter 9) Joel, Peggy & Esther Rogers, Zachariah Howwoswe & Elce Pachiker, "native Indians of...Chilmark," petitioned the General Court:

> (We) beg leve to Lay before your honours the Case of Abel Abel an Indian man of said town who through misconduct unless speedily prevented is likely to spend his Estate and to stand in need of relief he at present is sole owner of a good tract of land called Abels Neck and of another small tract with a house and barn...when he is free from Liquor is capable of earning by verious kinds of Labour he has none to support but himself and wife he lately obtained liberty from the general Cort to sell so much of said Land as should be sufficient to pay his debts...and still continues to be disordered by Liquor and is a great part of his time if not the greatest part intoxicated there by and since the said Abel obtained librty to sell his land he is much involved in debt some to Mr. Moses Lumbert and to Mr Benjamin Bassett Esqr who is a marchant...besides other debts

we...beg librty to mention the honourable Matthew Mayhew to be appointed his guardian to settle his debts already contracted and to take care of said Abel for the future he is Likewise liveing near to said Abel who will hear to and be persuaded by him more than by any other persons...

On 22 February 1792(DCRD 13/71)Matthew Mayhew, authorized by the 1790 Resolve, sold for L42 14s 4p to Moses Lumbert, 11 acres at Abels Neck, bounded:

...begining at the S end of a stone wall belonging to John Pease...ajoining the land of Nathan Skiff said wall standing on the middle line so called...thence NW to a pond and by sd pond N to sd Peases land and by his land to the first mentioned bounds...

On 27 October 1792 (MA Resolves, Chapter 15) Abel again petitioned the Legislature:

> That (he) is an old man more than sixty years of age & infirm, that he some years ago was called in the Providence of God to bury all his children & lately his Wife, who for many years was in a declining state—by all which means he has got considerably in debt, (he) begs leave further to observe that he thinks he shall have Estate in plenty when his debts are paid to carry him thro' Life, & being very desirous to pay all his just debts before he goes hence humbly prays for leave to sell about sixty pounds worth of his lands at...Abel's neck...

A letter from James Athearn, Judge of Probate for Dukes County, to the Senate and dated 30 Oct 1792, accompanied the above petition, stating > that about one year since he received a Resolve of the General Assembly... Impowering him... to appoint Matthew Mayhew Esqr or some other suitable person to be Guardian Over Abel Abel...in obedience thereto I aquainted the sd Matthew Mayhew who Desired time of consideration and some Time after gave his answer in the negative. I then solicited sundery persons in his the said Abels neighbourhood that I Thought sutable(sic) for the Trust who all Refused and he is yet at Liberty to Act for himself, I further give it as my real sentiment that the foregoing petition will be for his real benefit.

On 2 April 1793 (DCRD 13/152) William Jernigan & Benjamin Bassett, being authorized by the above Resolve, sold for L60 to Moses Lumbert, 24 acres at Abel's Neck, > begining at the SE corner of the land of the sd Lumbert... thence W about 9 rods to the Pond...from thence S by the water untill it comes to a fence and from the water SE by the fence to the S end of the fence to...the S end of a small piece of stone wall,... thence SE 23 rods to a rock about one rods distance from the meadow, from sd rock SE 19 rods to the Land of Thomas West...thence NE 81 rods by sd West's land and stone wall to a stone...thence W across said Neck 49 rods to the land of the sd Lumbert to a stone...and from thence (SW) 49 rods to the first mentioned corner of the sd Lumberts Land...

In another Resolve (1793, Chapter 18), Moses Lumbert stated on 10 May 1793 that Abel Abel of Chilmark was indebted to him for 12 pounds. On 22 January 1793 (DCRP 8/264) Joel Rogers and others asked the Probate Court to establish a guardianship for Abel Abel, who was "in danger of wasting his estate by idleness & excessive drinking." On 9 March 1795 (DCRD 14/17) Matthew Mayhew sold for L67 9s 10p to Moses Lumbert on behalf of Abel Abel, about 17 acres at Abel's Neck, bounded N by...Nathan Skiff...E and S by Thomas West, "and on all other parts by the land of the sd Moses."

The 1798 Massachusetts Direct Tax shows Abel Abel with 8 acres and a dwelling house in Chilmark. His will, made 6 Sept 1802 (DCRP, files), reads as follows:

> In the name of God Amen. I Abel Abel of Chilmark... labourer, considering the uncertainty of this life and being of sound and disposing mind blessed be God therefor, do make and publish this my last will and testament...viz. my body I resign to the earth from whenceit originated to be decently interred by the direction of my executor...my soul I resign to a > merciful God, who gave me existence—my estate both real and personal...I give and bequeath unto my nieces...Sarah Francis & Bethiah Sharper to be equally divided between them and I do hereby appoint Allen Mayhew sole executor...

Abel Abel signed the will; the inventory of his estate was ordered 26 March 1803 and completed 13 June 1803. Besides personal property, it contained "1 tract salt marsh" worth $48, and his "Homestead including the dwelling house", worth $98. On 17 September 1804 (DCRD 15/41) Sarah Francis, widow, and Bethiah Sharper wife of Pero Sharper, both of Chilmark, sold for $50 to Nathaniel May, 2 acres in Chilmark "at a place called Abel's Neck...being principally salt Marsh."

What became of Abel's homestead is not certain; his nieces may have lived there after his death. His grandniece Hannah (Francis) (Hazard) Cooper's land at Chilmark in the 1850s (see Cooper) may have been part of the original Abel homestead.

Mary C. Vanderhoop's "Gay Head Indians" series (Vineyard Gazette) says that "Abel Abel was a pilot...he was drowned in a storm off toward Nomansland, and only one of his legs was washed ashore." Whether this is fact is unknown, nor is is certain which Abel Abel was the one referred to. Certainly the man who died in 1804 would have been too elderly to be an active pilot.

> Children of Abel[5] Abel & wife, perhaps named Elizabeth, born Chilmark:
>
> > i-? Several children, all of whom died before 1792 (see above). They perhaps included Abel Abel and/or George Abel who were captives on the British prison ship "Jersey" during the Revolution(Dandridge, America Prisoners of the Revolution). Most of the prisoners died of miserable conditions(see Wamsley).
